Peter Quesnel, a Grey-Fryar of the Convent of Norwich, a Divine and Canonist, flourished about the End of this Age, and wrote a Directory of Law in the Court of Conscience, and in the Court Judicial; A Treatise of the Trinity, of the Catholick Faith, and of the seven Sacraments; A Treatise of the Sins, which hinder us from receiving the Sacraments, and the Penalties to be enjoined for these Sins; A Treatise to order such things as respect the Instructions or Judgments. These Treatises are in MS. in some Libraries in England; and the first is in the Vatican and Mr. Colbert's, Cod. 228. and 2302.

Marsilius ab Inghen.

Marsilius ab Inghen, a German (though Trithemius and Ball make him an Englishman) Dr. of Paris, Canon and Treasurer of the Church of S. Andrew at Colen, Founder and first Rector of the College of Heidelberg, died Aug. 20. 1394. He composed a Commentary upon the Book of the Mr. of the Sentences, printed at Strasburg in 1501.

Henry Knighton.

Henry Knighton, Canon-Regular of Leicester, composed an exact Chronicle of the History of England, divided into five Books, from 950. to 1395. and the History of the Depositon of Richard II. King of England, which happened in 1399. These Works are in the Collection of English Historians, printed at London in 1652.

William Thorn.

William Thorn, a Benedictin Monk of S. Augustine of Canterbury, composed a History of the Abbots of that Abby to 1397. copied as far as 1272. out of the History of Thomas Scott, this Chronicle is also in the Collection of English Historians, printed at London in 1952. p. 1757. 'Tis said also, that he wrote an History of the Kings of Kent, the Lives of some Saints, and a Chronicle of the Counties, Bishopricks, and Abbies of England [which is not printed, but is in MS. in Bennet-College Library at Cambridge, Cod. 67.]

Gerhard de Zutphen.

Gerhardus de Zutphen, one of the first Canons Regular of the Order of S. Jerome, or Clerks of the Community instituted by Gerhard Groot, died in the 31st. Year of his Age, Dec. 4. 1398. He has left us some Ascetick Treatises; One, Of the inward Reformation of the Powers of the Soul; the other about our Spiritual Progress, printed with the Works of Thomas à Kempis, who wrote his Life, and in the Biblioth. Patr. [Tom. 26. p. 234. as also at Paris and Colen, in 1539.]

Nicholas Eymericus

Nicholas Eymericus, born at Gironne, a City of Catalonia a Friar-Preacher, flourished in the Papacies of Innocent VI. Urban V. Gregory XI. and Clement VII. He was first Inquisitor-General for Innocent VI. about 1356. and coming to Avignon in the Papacy of Gregory XI. was made the Pope's Chaplain, and Judge of Heresies. He died at Gironne, Jan. 4. 1399. His principal Work is a Book, Intituled, A Directory for Inquisitors; printed the first time at Barcelona in 1503. and after at Rome in 1578. with the Corrections and Scholies of Penna, and after in the same City in 1587. and at Venice in 1595. with the Commentaries of the same Author. This Work is divided into three Parts. In the First, he treats of the Articles of Faith: In the Second, of the Punishment of the Hereticks, and the Inflictions which they deserve according to the Canon-Law and Decretals: What is Heresie and Error; Of the Differences of Heresies; And lastly, of those, which are subject to the Jurisdiction of the Inquisition, and the Crimes, which are out of its Knowledge. The third Part is about the manner of ordering the Process at the Tribunal of the Inquisition, of the Power and Privileges of the Officers, of the Witnesses, Criminals, and the Execution of Judgment upon them.

He composed several other Treatises, which are in MS. in Mr. Colbert's Library, N°. 2846, and 2847. The Titles of them are these, A Letter to the Cardinals against the Election of Urban VI. A Letter to the King [of France] in favour of Clement VII. some Verses upon Schism; A Treatise upon this Question, Whether the Three Persons of the Trinity be in the Eucharist, composed on the Occasion of a Controversie raised on that Subject in the Kingdom of Valence. The Curates had a Custom, when they administred the Sacrament to the Sick, to ask them, Do you believe, that this is the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost? and they were to answer, Yea. A Curate having put the same Question to a Doctor, to whom he administred the Sacrament, He answered, No; But that he believed, that it was the Body of Jesus Christ, who was the Son of God, and not the Father, or the Holy Spirit. This Answer being divulged, the Matter was brought to the Inquisitor, and he found the Abuse was common, and when the Cardinal of Valentia sought out means to remedy it, the Business was made worse by Sermons preached Pro & Con. A Monastick Doctor preached, that the Question of the Curate was impertinent, and that the sick Man's Answer was false. The Curates were angry at this Sermon, and one of them preached in one of the Parishes of the City, that there being three Things in Jesus Christ, his Body, Soul and Divinity, if it be asked, whether the Flesh of Christ be in the Sacrament, the Answer must be, Yea; and if his Soul were there, the Answer must also be, Yea. And lastly, if we speak of his Essence, and of his Divine Nature, and ask, Do you believe that this last is the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost? A Christian must answer, Yea, yea, yea; because the Three Persons are essentially there. This Curate was not content to preach this Doctrine, but he published it by Writing. He was contradicted by some that stood by, and this caused a great Scandal, which the Inquisitor could not appease. The Cardinal of Valentia called the Divines together, and made the Curate retract his Assertion; but he went from Valentia, and appealed to the Holy See, and caused the Inquisitor to be summoned thither. 'Twas to instruct Pope Clement VII. in this Matter, that Eymericus composed this Treatise in 1390. Let us now come to the other Treatises which are in that MS. This last is followed with a Treatise against Raymundus Lullus, presented the same Year to Pope Clement VII. who gave it to the Cardinal of S. Angelo, to be examined; a Dialogue against the Followers of Lullus; Another Treatise, entitled, the Enchantment of the Lullists, and a Tract against such as pray to Dæmons. The 2847 Volume contains these following Treatises; A Treatise against those, that oppose the Pre-eminence of Jesus Christ and the Virgin; A Confession of the Faith of Jesus Christ; A Tract against the Oath taken by the Pope and Cardinals after the Death of Clement VII. and against the Letter of the University of Paris (which proves that Eymericus was not dead in 1393. as some have assured us) a Treatise against the Chymists; The Corrector of the Reprimand; A Treatise against those, who will define the Time of the End of the World; A Treatise against Astrologers, Necromancers, and other Diviners; The Illustration of his Explication; A Treatise against those, who broached this Heresie, that St. John the Evangelist was the natural Son of the Virgin Mary; A Treatise of the admirable Sanctity of the Mother of God-Man; The Enchantment of the University of Lerida, concerning the twenty Articles dispersed by Anthony Riera, Student of the University of Valentia; and a Treatise upon the Explication of the 22 Articles, in which he does not commonly follow the Master of the Sentences.

Matthew d'Eureux.

Matthew d' Eureux, a Preaching-Friar, flourished in the Reign of Charles VI. King of France. He is the Author of a Commentary upon the Pentateuch, and Postills upon Isaiah, and upon several other Books of the Bible, which are in MS. in the Library of the Friars-Preachers at Eureux, where they were put by Robert Begard Doctor of Divinity, and Confessor to Charles VII.

Nicholas Gorham.

Nicholas de Gorham, a Preaching-Friar, is certainly an Author of the XIVth. Age; but some make him an Englishman and others a Frenchman, and some place him about 1304. and others about 1350. but the last about 1390. or 1400. which is most likely. He has composed several Works, particularly Commentaries upon several Books of Scripture and Sermons. His Commentaries upon the four Evangelists, the Acts of the Apostles, St. Paul's Epistles, the Canonical Epistles, and the Revelation have been printed in divers Places [as at Colen in 1537. at Haguenau 1502. and Paris 1521] and with his Sermons upon the whole Year, at Antwerp in 1617. and 1620.

John Bromiard.

John Bromiard of Hartford in England; a Preaching-Friar, a Doctor of Oxford and Professor of Divinity at Cambridge, was one of the Adversaries of Wicklife, in the Council held at London in 1382. and died in the following Age. He has left us a Summ for Preachers, in which he has ranked in an Alphabetical Order many Common-places of Morality. It was printed at Nuremberg in 1485. and at Venice in 1586. There are some other Treatises of this Author in MS. in the Libraries of England; and among others, a Treatise of the Civil and Canon Law, applied to Morality; His Explications concerning the Ceremony of the Mass, and his Exhortations [viz in the publick Library, and that of Pembroke-Hall in Cambridge, and New-College in Oxford.]

William Wodford.

William Wodford, or Wilford, an Englishman of the Order of Grey-Friars, a Doctor of Oxford, chosen in a Council held at London in 1396. to confute by writing these Propositions taken out of Wicklife's Trilogus, and condemned in that Council, composed a Treatise upon that Subject dedicated to Thomas Archbishop of Canterbury, which is printed in the Fasciculus rerum expetendarum [at Colen 1535. p. 96.] In it he confutes 18 Articles, of which we shall speak in treating of the Heresie of Wicklife. There are also in the Libraries in England, some other MS. Treatises of this Author's; and among others, an Apology against Richardus Armachanus, concerning the Poverty and Begging of Jesus Christ; An Extract of the Errors of that Author; A Treatise of the Sacrament of the Altar. A Summ of Virtues. William Wodford died at Glocester in 1397.

Rodolphus de Rivo.

Rodolphus de Rivo, a Native of Breda, Dean of the Church of Tongres, died at Rome in 1401. or as others hold, Nov. 2. 1403. He composed an excellent Treatise upon the Divine Offices, intitled, Of the Observation of the Canons; in which he treats with Exactness upon the Usage and Rules of the Ecclesiastical Offices, and shews, that Men ought to follow, as much as is possible, Antiquity, and avoid Novelties in the Divine Offices, from whence he concludes in his 22d. Proposition, that Men ought to keep to the ancient Breviaries, and not follow that in use at Rome, because it is not the Service of the ancient Roman Church, but a shorter Office sung in the Pope's Chappel, gathered in the time of Innocent III. and which the Grey-Friars followed. He treats in the last Article of the Mass, its Ceremonies and Prayers. This Treatise is printed in the Bibliotheca Patrum, and by it self at Louvain in 1568. The same Author has composed an History of the three Bishops of Liege, viz. Engelbert de la Marca, John de Arkel, and Arnold de Horn, from 1347. to 1386. published by Chapeaville in his History of Liege, printed at Leige in 1616. Tom. 3.

John de Tambach

Joannes Tambacus, or de Tambach, a Town in Alsatia, a Monk of the Order of Friars-Preachers in the Monastery of Strasburg, afterward Rector of the University of Prague, and created Master of the sacred Palace by Urban V. in 1366. He died in the following Age, being above 80 Years old; He composed a Work, entitled, the Consolation of Theology, or the Looking-Glass of Wisdom [or Patience] finished in 1316. printed at Paris in 1493. at Colen in 1502. at Nuremberg in 1509. Father Alexander cites another Work of this Author's, of Nature and Grace, which is in MS. in the Library of the great Convent of Jacobins, or White-Friars at Paris. Trithemius also mentions a Treatise of John Tambacus, Of the Delights of Paradise, and some Sermons.

Raymundus Jordanus.

Raymundus Jordanus, whose Works have gone a long time under the Name of Idiota, lived about the End of this Age, and was a Canon-Regular, Provost [of that Order] in Usez, and then Abbot of Cella in Berry. All his Works which have been printed several times in the Bibliotheca Patrum, under the Name of Idiota, were put out under his Name, by the Jesuit Theophilus Rainaudus, and printed at Paris in 1654. They consist of eleven Contemplations upon different Subjects; A Treatise of the Virgins; Three Books of a Monk's Life; The Spiritual or Mystical Eye, which Waddingus attributes to Joannes Gualleñsis; Rules of a Christian Life; which rather belong to Picus Mirandula; A Paraphrase upon the 15th Psalm.

Francis Ximenes.

Franciscus Ximenius, of Gironne in Spain, Bishop of Elne or Perpignan, and dignified with the Title of Patriarch of Jerusalem; flourished at the End of this Age, and in the Beginning of the next: He left us some Works of Piety, and among others, A Book of the Angelical Life, printed at Alcala [or Complutum] in 1527. A Treatise De Scala Cœli [or the Ladder of Heaven] printed at Barcelona in 1501. A Treatise for the Instruction of Bishops and Superiors, entitled Pastorale [or a Pastoral] printed at the same place in 1495. Four Books of a Christian Life, printed at Valentia in 1484. and at Granada in 1496.

Anthony de Butrio.

Antonius de Butrio, a Lawyer of Bononia, flourished at the End of this Age, and in the Beginning of the next. He has composed a Commentary upon the five Books of the Decretals, printed at Venice in 1578. Another Comment upon the sixth printed at the same place in 1575. A Repertory of the Canon and Civil Law printed several times in several places; and some other Treatises of the Civil Law. He died as some say, Octob. 7. 1408. and as others, in 1417.

Lucius Colucci-us.

Lucius Coluccius Pierus Salutatus de Stignano, Chancellor of Florence, and Secretary to Urban V. and Gregory XI. succeeded Petrach in the Imperial Dignity of Learning [i. e. was made Poet Laureat after him] He flourished from 1360. and died not till May 12. 1406. We have only two Letters of his. The one in Commendation of Cardinal Nicholas de Capocia, dedicated to Nicholas Auximus, the chief Notary of the Pope; the other to Brunus the Pope's Secretary, containing the Commendation of of Urban V. and a Petition addressed to the King of France in the Name of the People of Florence, against the Faction of the Gibelines presented 1404. Ancient pieces, which have been published by Mr. Baluzius, in the fourth Tome of his Miscellanies.

lanies. This Author also wrote two Books of the true Religion; A Discourse of the Excellency of the Civil Law and Physick; A Book of Fortune and Destiny; Several Letters; A small Work, entitled, Loculum Noctis, or, the Night-pouch; which are in MS. in the Libraries of Florence. The Letters of his which Mr. Baluzius has published, give us a sufficient Proof of the Ingenuity, Elegancy and Politeness of this Author.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flourished in the Fourteenth Age.

Some attribute to Henry de Baume, or de Palma, a Grey-Friar, who lived about the End of this Age, a Treatise of mystical Divinity, which is printed among the Works of S. Bonaventure, and which others attribute to John de Parma.

Henry de Baume.

Bertrand de Trille, of the Diocess of Nismes, of the Order of Preaching-Friars, flourished about the End of the Age. Mr. Baluzius has put out an Abridgment of the Lives of the Popes at Avignon composed by this Author.

Herentals.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flourished in the Fourteenth Age.

Although the Number of the Authors, of which we have already spoken, be great; yet there are many others, whose Works are lost, or hidden in some Libraries, whose Names are preserved to us; and perhaps there were several others, whose Memory is lost. What Trithemius has recovered of them, and saved from Oblivion by mentioning them, and their Works, are as follow.

Authors of the Fourteenth Century whose Works are lost.

Richard de Sienna, Vice-Chancellor of the Church of Rome, and afterwards Cardinal-deacon, by the Title of S. Eustachius; was one of those whom Pope Boniface ordered to compile the sixth Book of the Decretals, and composed some other Works of the Law.

Petrus de Dacea, made a Kalendar about the Beginning of this Age.

These Authors flourished under the Empire of Albertus of Austria.

Jacobus de Viterbo, an Hermit of the Order of S, Augustin, Archbishop of Naples, composed a Book of the Government of Christians, dedicated to Clement V. a Writing upon the Sentences, and made some quodlibetical Questions. This Author flourished under the Empire of Henry de Luxemburgh, in the Beginning of this Age.

Alexander of Alexandria, a Grey-Fryar, wrote upon the Sentences, and made some Commentaries upon the Books of Aristotle.

Eckard, a German, of the Order of the Friars-Preachers, who being addicted to the Terms of Philosophy, brought into Divinity some Opinions erroneous, and contrary to the Judgments of other Divines; insomuch that seventeen of his Propositions were condemned by the Pope, and he was forced to recant them at the End of his Life. They were taken for the most part out of his Exposition upon the Gospel of S. John. They were also condemned in 1430. by the Faculty of Divinity at Heidelberg. Nevertheless, Trithemius says, that there were learned and profitable Matters in this Author's Writings, when he wrote conformable to the Doctrine of the Church, and of this sort he mentions the Works following; A Commentary upon the four Books of the Sentences; Commentaries upon Genesis, Exodus, the Book of Wisdom, the Canticles, the Gospel of S. John, and the Lord's-Prayer; A Discourse held in the Chapter of the Friars-Preachers; Some Theses and Sermons.

Guido, a Priest, and afterwards as some think, Bishop of Ferrara, wrote some Works in Verse and in Prose, and among others, a Poem of the History of the Old and New Testament, dedicated to Clement V. which Trithemius had seen, and bears this Title, The Pearl of the Bible.

Petrus de Saxonia, a Grey-Fryar, composed a Summ of Cases and Sermons.

Gerhardus de Bononia, the eleventh General of the Carmelites, composed a Commentary upon the Sentences, some Sermons, certain ordinary and quodlibetical Questions, and began a Summ of Divinity, which his sudden Death at Avignon in 1317 hindred him from finishing.

Martin, a Friar-Preacher, Penitentiary of Rome, composed a Table of Decrees, a short Chronicle, some Sermons, and a Collection of divers Miracles.

Sibertus de Beka, a Carmelite of Germany, composed a Commentary upon the Sentences, A Summ of the New Law, a Commentary upon his Rule, and corrected the Office of his Order.

Another Carmelite, named Peter de Perpignan, is the Author of a Commentary upon the Master of the Sentences, of a Work upon the Psalms, and some Sermons.

John Brammart, of the same Order, wrote Works of the same Nature.

Henry d' Erford, a German, wrote an Historical Account of things memorable.

John Taceſphalus, an English Carmelite of the Convent of Norwich, wrote upon the Sentences, composed several Sermons, and made a Commentary upon the Revelations.

Nicholas Dorbin, of the same Countrey and same Order, wrote upon the Sentences, and made some Questions.

Tilman, a Carmelite of Aix la Chapelle, a Doctor of Colen, wrote upon the Sentences, made a Commentary upon the Evangelist S. Matthew, and upon other Books of Scripture, and several Sermons.

Petrus Thomas, of the same Order, Bishop of Patti in Sicily, and after Archbishop of Crete, and last of all honoured with the Title of Patriarch of Constantinople, was sent by the Popes on several Embassages, and died in Reputation for his Sanctity; He was a famous Preacher in his time, and has left us several of his Sermons, and a Commentary upon the Sentences.

Bartholomew, an Englishman, a Grey-Friar, is the Author of several Sermons, and of a Treatise of the Properties of Things.

Petrus Boberus, Abbot of S. Anianus of the Order of S. Benedict, composed several small Tracts for his Monks; and among others, A Treatise upon the Rule of S. Benedict, in which he compares all the Precepts and Councils of that Rule with the Canon-Law. He also composed a Treatise upon the Mirror of Monks, and a small Work of the Marks of Words.

Jacobus de Alta Villa, of Rhingaw near Mayence, is the Author of a Treatise upon the Sentences, and some other Questions.

John d' Imenhusen, a German, wrote also upon the Sentences, and made some Sermons.

Leonard de Gifton, the 24th General of the Grey-Friars, made Cardinal by the Title of S. Sixtus by Clement VII. in 1378. while he abode at Naples after the Decease of Clement, was put in Prison, but being again released, was present at the Election of Benedict XIII. 1394. He has left several Works. Trithemius makes mention of a Commentary upon the Sentences; Of a considerable Summ; A Commentary upon the Canticles, and several Sermons.

Joannes Balistarii, a Catalonian, the 17th General of the Order of Carmelites, is the Author of a Treatise dedicated to Pope Gregory XI, Of the War of the Church Militant against the Assaults of Antichrist. He also composed a Treatise upon the Sentences, and some Sermons. He died in 1374. in the Convent of Majorca.

Henry de Kalkar, a German, a Canon of St. George at Colen, after a Carthusian and Prior of several Houses of that Order, and a Definer, died in 1408. in the 80th. Year of his Age, after he had lived 43 Years in his Order. He composed several Works of Piety, of which the most part are preserved in the Carthusian Monastery at Colen, viz. A Treatise of the Beginning, and Progress of the Order of Carthusians; an Instruction in Rhetorick; an Instruction in Musick; a Treatise of the Subjects, and the Distinction of Sciences; divers Letters; some Sermons made in their Chapters; a Ladder of spiritual Exercise in form of an Oration; the daily Holocaust, or Burnt-offering of spiritual Exercise; an Exhortation to the Carthusians of Coblentz; a Psalter of the Virgin, or a Prose, which contains an 150 Words in six Ave's; the Manner of holding Conferences after the Carthusian Custom.

Richard de Maydeston, an English Carmelite, wrote a Treatise against the Lollards, and composed several Sermons.

John, a Benedictin Monk of Castel, in the Diocess of Aichstet, composed a considerable Work upon the Rule of St. Benedict, an Abridgment of the Bible; some Sermons for the Sundays, and Feasts of the Year; 42 Sermons upon the Passion of our Saviour, and some Letters.

Conradus, a German, Doctor of Paris and Canon of Ratisbonne, composed some Books of moral Philosophy.

John de Schodehove, Prior of the Carmelites at Malines, wrote a Work for the Use of Preachers, upon the Virtues and Vices, and other Matters for Preaching, put into an Alphabetical Order, entitled, Polypodium, and several Sermons.

Philip de Ferrieres, a Native of Thoulouse, Bishop of Badajoz in Spain, a famous Preacher, has left us Sermons for all the Sundays, and Festivals of the Year.

Walter Disse an Englishman and a Carmelite, Legate of Boniface IX. into England, Spain, and France, to preach a Crusado there. He composed a Treatise against the Lollards, a Treatise of Schism, a Commentary upon some Psalms, and Sermons.

John de Hisden, a Knight Hospitaller of St. John of Jerusalem, has left his Explications upon the New Testament, which he made at Paris, and some Sermons.

William Oppenbach, a German, and Doctor of Paris, wrote upon the Sentences, and composed some Questions and Sermons.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flourished in the Fourteenth Age.

John Gluel, of Aix la Chapelle, Prior of the Carmelites at Colen, is the Author of a Treatise of the Original and Progress of his Order, intitled, The Mirrour of the Carmelites, and some Sermons for Lent, and for all the Year.

Henry Euta, or Oyta, a German, Professor at Vienna in Austria, wrote upon the Sentences, a Treatise of the Conception of the Virgin, a Treatise of Contracts, and some Sermons.

Henry d' Andernac, a German Carmelite, has also Written upon the Sentences, some Sermons and Questions.

Blaisus Andernarius, a Frenchman of the same Order, wrote upon the Sentences, some Sermons and Questions.

John, Abbot of St. Bavon, of the Order of St. Benedict, has wrote a Treatise of the Use of Flesh, in which he proves, that by the Rule of St. Benedict, it is not allowed to the Monks, which are not sick, to eat of it.

Richard de Lavinham, an English Carmelite, wrote a Treatise against the Lollards, a Book of the Foundation of his Order, a Defence of St. Bridget's Book, and some Sermons.

John de Werden, a Grey-Friar, composed double Sermons for all the Sundays and Festivals of the Year, and one Lent Sermon.

John de Campsen, an English Carmelite, wrote some Sermons.

Philip, Abbot of Otterburg, in the Diocess of Worms, wrote a Commentary upon the Canticles, some Sermons, and Letters.

Lastly, Not to tarry longer, to make a tedious Enumeration of the Names, and Works of the Divines and Canonists of this Age, which we can gain the Knowledge of; it shall suffice to observe, That there was hardly any Doctor of Divinity, which did not make a Commentary upon the Master of the Sentences, and Postills, or Lectures upon some Books of the Holy Scripture, which they delivered publickly in the Universities to obtain their Degrees, and then they applied themselves wholly to preaching; from whence comes the great Number of Commentaries upon the Sentences, Postills, and Sermons. The Canonists employed themselves usually to comment upon the Decretals, and particularly, the sixth Book of Boniface's. I will not speak of the famous Lawyers of this Age, as Peter de Belleperche, James d'Arena, Nicholas of Naples, James of Ravenna, Francis Accursus, Martin de Fano, William de Cumes, Richard de Malombre, Lambertinus de Ramponi, Cinus de Pistoy, Oldrad de Laude, Nicholas de Modena, Bartholus; nor of such as were eminent for Physick, as Dinus, Thomas de Garba, Gentilis de Foligno, Peter d' Apona, Philip de Bergamo; or for Astronomy, as John de Lignieres, John Dank, John Eschidi, John Eliger de Gondersleven; nor of those who have excelled in the Study of Human Learning, as Dantes, Aliger, and Paul de Perusa; because their Works have no Relation to Ecclesiastical Matters.

CHAP. VI.

The History of the Greek Church, and the Authors, that flourished in the East, in the Fourteenth Century.

The History of the Greek Emperors.

THE Greek Empire continued to be governed by the Palæologi; Andronicus, the Son of Michael, having lost his Son, caused young Andronicus his Grand-child, to be declared Emperor, who revolted from him, and forced him to quit the Empire in 1328. four Years before his Death. This Man reigned till the Year 1341. and left at his Death two Children in their Minority, John and Manuel Palæologi, to whom he nominated John Cantacuzenus Guardian; but the Empress soon drove him from Constantinople: He retired into Macedonia, whither many of the Lords of the Empire being come to him, obliged him to assume the Title of Emperor; he was crowned at Adrianople by the Patriarch of Jerusalem, made War upon the young Princes, and having five Years after in 1347. recovered the City of Constantinople, he treated with John Palæologus, and joined him in the Empire, on the Condition he might govern alone, till he came of Age; he gave him likewise his Daughter in Marriage: Nevertheless, this Agreement lasted not long: The War being again renewed, John Palæologus had the better, and made himself Master of Constantinople; Cantacuzenus yielded up the Empire, and retired in the Year 1357. into a Monastery, where he died a considerable Time after. John Palæologus remaining in the sole Possession of the Empire, had upon his Hands a troublesom War with the Turks, and came into the West to demand Assistance of the Latins. In his Absence, Andronicus his eldest Son, had a mind to possess himself of the Empire, and left his Father in the Hands of the Venetians, who had detained him for Money, that he owed, without any thoughts of releasing him. But Manuel his third Son, Governor of Thessalonica, having gotten together a Sum of Money, payed his Fathers Debts, and deserved by this Kindness to be made Partner of the Empire, in the Year 1384. Andronicus incensed at this, that his younger Brother was preferred before him, applied himself to Bajazet, and having obtain'd Aid of him, took Constantinople, and put his Father and Brother in Prison. They remained there three Years; but having found Means to get out, and flying unto Bajazet, who was displeas'd with Andronicus, they recover'd the Empire, and delivered up Andronicus to the Turks. John Palæologus died in a short time after in the Year in 1391. Manuel was not more fortunate than his Father; for Bajazet held Constantinople, in his Reign, besieged ten Years. He came in vain to demand Succours of the Latins against him; but by good Fortune unlooked for, Tamerlane King of the Tartars, forced Ba- jazet to raise the Siege, vanquished him and took him Prisoner; After this, Manuel made Peace with Mahomet II. and left the Empire to John his Son, who reigned to the Year 1449. when he was succeeded by his Son Constantine, the last of the Greek Emperors in Constantinople, which was taken by the Turks, in the year 1453.

The History of the Greek Emperors.

The Inclination of the Greeks to the Latines.

Under these Emperors, the Government of the East and of the Greek Church fell to decay, by the Victories which the Turks obtained over the Christians, from whom they presently took the Provinces, they had in Asia, and then passing into Europe, they possess'd themselves by Degrees of all the Cities in the Greek Empire. This Progress of the Infidels could not induce the Greeks to unite themselves to the Church of Rome, but they appear'd on the contrary more averse than ever from Peace, and more incensed against the Latines, as many Books set forth by their Authors against the Procession of the Holy Ghost, against the Use of unleavened Bread in the Eucharist, and against the Primacy of the Pope, written with sharpness, do testifie. Nevertheless there were some among them, who declared for the Latines, and also writ in their Favour. As to their Emperors, the Necessity of their Affairs, and the Need they had of the Help of the Latine Princes, rendered them more inclinable, at least in shew, to a Union.

The Proposal of Union under Andronicus.

About the year 1339. young Andronicus sent Barlaam Abbot of the Monastery of St. Saviour from Constantinople, with a Lord named Stephen Dandulus, unto Philip de Valois King of France, and to Robert King of Sicily, to desire Assistance of them; and because he could not hope to prevail, but by uniting himself to the Church of Rome, he gave them this Matter in charge. These two Envoys came to Benedict XII. with Letters of Recommendation from both these Kings, and Barlaam proposed to this Pope in the presence of the College of Cardinals, to call a General Council, wherein should be discussed the Question concerning the Procession of the Holy Ghost, that the Latines and the Greeks after having on both Sides urged their Arguments for their respective Opinions, might come to an Agreement; but above all things he besought his Holiness to cause, that the Princes of Europe should afford their Assistance to the Greeks, for the Recovery of their Cities, which the Turks had seized. The Pope demanded of them, whether they had a full Power from the Emperor, the great Lords, and chief Prelates of Greece? They made answer, That they had it not in Writing, and yet the Pope gave them Leave to propound the Means of Re-union, which they judged might be successful. Barlaam after having made a Protestation, that he spake sincerely, and had nothing in Prospect, but the Good of the Church, and the Agreement of all Christians, declared, there were two Ways to attain to a Union; the one by Force, the other voluntary, by way of Instruction: That it was not convenient to think of the first, but to adhere to the latter, which one may distinguish into two, in reference to the learned, and to the common People; that as to the Learned, it would be easie to agree with them, because if thirty or forty were sent from the East, they would make no difficulty to join issue; but that would not be enough for the People, because these Persons upon their return would be accus'd of being corrupted, and would not be credited; that the only way were to call a General Council, whose Decision would be receiv'd of all the World with Respect; if it be objected to this, that there had been one already held at Lyons, it ought to be observed, that the Greeks never allow'd of it, because those from Greece, who assisted at that Council, were not sent thither by the four Patriarchs, nor by the People; but the Emperor singly: That if the Pope designed to call a Council, to which the Greeks should submit, he must first send Legates into the East, full of Piety, Mildness and Humility, with Letters, by which his Holiness would intreat the four Patriarchs, and the other Bishops, to meet in some place to search into Means of Union; that if it were managed thus, the Emperor, the Patriarchs, and the People would admit of a General Council, whose Determinations would be received without Contradiction. After this, Barlaam gave his Reasons, why the Latines ought to assist the Græcians against the Turks, even before the Union. The Pope having advised with the Cardinals, made answer to the Deputies of the Græcian Emperor, That the Procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son, being a Matter decided, was no more liable to dispute, nor debate. The Greek Deputies proposed, that at the least the Greeks be left at Liberty to continue in the same Judgment: It was replied, they could not dispense with it, because there was but one Faith in the Church; and there was propounded to them an easie way of Agreement, viz. That the four Patriarchs should depute some Persons of Note in the West, with sufficient Power to confer with such as the Pope should nominate, not to dispute, but to be instructed in the Truth, and to remove their Scruple: That for the Meeting of a General Council, it was to no Purpose, neither could it be effected, especially at this Juncture. Barlaam return'd, That though the Procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son went for currant Truth among the Latines, the Greeks notwithstanding were in a Doubt of his proceeding from the Son, and that they could not be convinced herein, but by the way of Discussion; that this was ever practised in the Church; that if it were refused them, they should suspect, the Latines distrusted the Goodness of their Cause; That General Councils had ever been useful, and done the Church credit; In fine, he propounded to make a Re-union, and leave both Parties free to hold what they pleased as to this Question, to oblige the Greeks to grant the Church of Rome the Honours which the ancient Patriarchs had allowed, and which were determined by the Laws of the Emperors, and by the Canons of the Holy Fathers; and that the Latines on their part should give way to allow to the Church and Empire of Constantinople the Rights they enjoy by ancient Custom, by the Laws, and by the Canons. He concludes with demanding of Succours. The Pope denied him, for fear the Greeks, when strengthened and raised by the Holy See, and by the Catholick Princes of Europe, should afterwards desert them, as they had done before, Barlaam before his Departure delivered a fresh Memorial to the Pope; wherein he set forth, That it was impossible to send Deputies from the East, as he demanded, because whatever good Design the Emperor might have to settle the Union, he durst not discover it; and that the Patriarch of Constantinople could not send Legates, without consulting the other Patriarchs, which he could not do, by reason of the Wars, and that otherwise he was not certain the other Patriarchs would consent to it; he added a Promise, that notwithstanding he would do his utmost. This Project had no Issue, and things remained in Greece in the Posture they were in, as to the Latines.

The History of the Greek Emperors.

Andronicus being dead in the year 1341. the Empress to strengthen her self against Cantacuzenus, writ to Pope Clement VI. that if she were able to conquer her Enemies, she would embrace the Doctrine and Ceremonies of the Church of Rome. The Pope commended her Design, exhorted her to persist in it, and promised her Succours. Cantacuzenus sent some time after George Spanopulus, Master of his Wardrobe, and Sigerus, Prætor of the People, in Quality of Ambassadors; to whom he joined a Latine named Francis, a Friend of the Pope's, giving them in Charge to remove any Prejudice he might have against this Prince, and to demand Aid against the Infidels. Clement VI. gave these Ambassadors a kind Reception, and sent with them two Bishops, one of the Order of Grey Friars, and the other of the Order of Friars-Preachers to treat of the Union. They agreed with the Emperor, that the Pope should call a Council; that he should give the Emperor notice of the time and place, and that the Emperor should call the Patriarchs together, to the intent they might send Deputies thither. The Pope accepted this Proposal; but he wrote to the Emperor, that he could not put it in Execution suddenly, because of the Wars in Italy. Cantacuzenus gave him thanks for his good Intentions, and intreated him to do what was possible for the assembling of this Council; but the Pope died, and it was no more mention'd.

Projects for Union under Cantacuzenus.

The Union of John Palæologus.

In the year 1369. the Emperor John Palæologus, seeing himself hard beset on all sides by the Turks, made a Voyage into Italy, to demand Succours of the Christian Princes in Europe. He was well received there, and repaired to Rome, where Pope Urban V. came to meet him on the 13th of October, and on the 18th of the same Month, he made a Profession of Faith, which he signed with his Hand, and sealed with own Seal in the presence of five Cardinals, and other Witnesses, to the end he might be received into Communion, whereby he acknowledged the Procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son, the Pains of Purgatory, Prayers for the Dead, the Vision of Souls purged from all Sin soon after Death, the Seven Sacraments, the Validity of the Sacrifice of the Eucharist offered with unleavened Bread, the Change of the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, the Validity of second, third and fourth Marriages, the Primacy of the Church of Rome over the whole Catholick Church, given with full Power by Jesus Christ to St. Peter, to whom the Pope of Rome is Successor, to whom recourse ought to be had in all Causes, that concern the Church; to whom all Churches and all Bishops owe Obedience and Submission, who hath the fulness of Power, &c. He promises and engages by Oath upon the Holy Gospels inviolably to hold this Doctrine, and utterly renounces the Schism. Notwithstanding this Act of Submission, John Palæologus drew not much Assistance from the western Princes; but was arrested by the Venetians for the Payment of his Debts, and was not released, till his Son Manuel had discharged them. This latter coming to the Empire, went also to the West about the End of this Century, there to demand Succours against Bajazet, who had laid Siege to Constantinople; but he in vain went over Italy, France, England and Germany, and could obtain but very little Aid from the French King, insomuch, that he not only rejected the Opinion of the Latines, but also wrote against them about the Procession of the Holy Ghost.

The

The Contests between the Barlaamites and Palamites.

The Greeks had likewise in the Fourteenth Century Disputes among them upon Points of Doctrine, which were pushed on with great Heat on both Sides. The Heads of the two Parties were Barlaam, and Palamas: The first was a Monk of Calabria, learned and cunning, who being come to Constantinople, buoyed up by the Authority of the Emperor, the young Andronicus, undertook the Monks, styl'd Hesicasts, or Quietists, examined their Method of Prayer, and having therein observed things he did not like, he writ against them, and accused them of reviving the Errors of the Euchites, and the Messalianists, giving them a new Name of Omphalo Psychi, that is to say, Navellists; because as we have noted, in speaking of Simeon of Xeroxerce, one of the Maxims of these Hesicasts was to have the Eye fixed on the middle of the Belly, as the place, where was the Seat of the Faculties of the Soul; insomuch that being in that Posture, they imagined to see a Light altogether Divine. When they were asked, what kind of thing this Light was; they answer'd, That it was Light it self, and the Glory of God which had appeared on Mount Tabor, and asserted, that this Light was uncreated and incorruptible, though it were not the Essence of God: They said the same thing of all the Occasions God had to make his Glory appear to Men, and pretended that the Saints themselves and the Angels saw not the Divine Essence, but this uncreated Light, which they named the Operation of God. They laid it down as a Principle, that this Operation was distinguished from the Divine Essence, and yet eternal, uncreated and incorruptible, and that one might also give it the Name of Divinity. Barlaam impeach'd Palamas, and the other Monks, who held these Opinions before the Emperor and the Patriarch of Constantinople. A Council was called in this City in the Year 1340. where two of the Points, which we have touched upon, concerning Prayer, and the Light of Tabor were there chiefly debated. Barlaam asked a great many Questions, and opposed the Opinion of Palamas, by maintaining, that this Light could not be uncreated and incorruptible, if it were not the very Essence of God, and that nothing could be perceived by the Eyes of the Body, but that which was created. The Palamites defended their Opinion, and affirmed, That this Light, which had appeared on Mount Tabor, was uncreated; that the holy Fathers called it Divine, though it was not the Essence of God, but his Vertue, his Grace, his Glory, his Brightness, which issued from the Essence of God; that the Saints and Angels saw this eternal Glory, tho' they saw not the Essence of God: They maintain'd likewise, that the Name of Divinity might be given to this Light, and to other Divine Operations; so that in this they seemed to allow many subordinate Divinities, flowing from the Substantial Divinity. The Opinion of Barlaam was rejected in this first Convention.

The first Council of Constantinople against the Barlaamites, in 1340.

The second Council of Constantinople against Acindynus

Some time after, another Monk, named Gregory Acindynus, continuing to maintain the Opinion of Barlaam, though he made as if he opposed it, and stoutly attacking that of Palamas, was cited to a Synod held in presence of John Cantacuzenus, a little after the Death of Andronicus in the Vestry of St. Peter's Church in Constantinople, by John Patriarch of that City; where thirteen Bishops were present. Acindynus was there convicted to be of Barlaam's Opinion concerning the Light of Tabor, and to believe it created and limited, of the same Nature with other Lights, and condemned with Barlaam. 'Twas in this second Convention, they prepared a Volume, wherein they collected divers Passages of the Greek Fathers, concerning the Light of Tabor, and Prayer, which appeared to favour the Opinion of Palamas. They condemned the Doctrine and Person of Barlaam, and Acindynus, silenced these Contests, and forbid on pain of Excommunication to accuse the Monks of Heresie.

The third Council of Constantinople against the Palamites.

The Palamites puffed up with this Victory, grew more positive for their new Doctrine than ever, and pushing their Principles farther, separated the Husbands from their Wives, shaved them for Monks, and raised new Disturbances in Constantinople. The Patriarch after Admonition resolved to expel them the City, caused the most mutinous to be arrested, and required a Profession of Faith from the Clergy, cited Palamas and Isidore, elected to the Bishoprick of Monembase, to render an Account of their Carriage, and their Doctrine. These two persisting obstinate in their Errors, were condemned and deposed in a Synod, held by John Patriarch of Constantinople, in which assisted the Patriarch of Antioch, and divers Bishops. The Condemned paid no respect to this Judgment, and continued to exercise the Functions of their Priesthood; which put the Patriarch upon making a Discourse addressed to all the Faithful, to exhort them to separate from Palamas, and all his Followers. This passed in the time, that Cantacuzenus was banished under the Empress Anne; but when Cantacuzenus had made himself Master of Constantinople, the Empress Anne and John Palæologus willing to make use of Palamas to make their Peace, got him absolved in a Convention, in which the Patriarch John was condemned, and sent him afterwards to Cantacuzenus, to the end he might do the Palæologi good Offices with the Conqueror. John dying a little time after, Cantacuzenus proposed Palamas to fill his place, but not being able to compass it, he procured his Friend Isidore to be chosen Patriarch of Constantinople, and Palamas was some time after made Archbishop of Thessalonica. Their Adversaries complained loudly of this Promotion, protested it was void, and against the Canons, forbidding to give Bishopricks to Persons deposed in a Synod, accused them of Blasphemy and Heresie, of admitting two Deities, of not observing the Fasts prescribed by the Church, of despoiling the Images, of breaking the sacred Vessels; and upon this ground they refused to communicate with them, demanded a Synod, to depose them. And indeed, ten Bishops of this Party being assembled at Constantinople, authorized as they pretended, by the Letters of more than twenty others, gave Sentence of Deposing against Isidore and Palamas, and exhorted all the Faithful not to hold Communion with them. This Sentence is dated in July, in the Year 1347. Notwithstanding Isidore remain'd in Possession of the Patriarchal See of Constantinople, as long as he lived, and Callistus, who succeeded, upheld the same Party.

The fourth Council of Constantinople against the Palamites.

This Patriarch purposing to subdue entirely the Remainder of the Party of Barlaam and Acindynus, which was supported by Nicephorus Gregoras and divers others, assembled a Council at Constantinople, which was held in presence of Cantacuzenus, and John Palæologus in a Hall of the Palace of Blacherne, and consisting of twenty five Metropolitans, of some Bishops, and many Priests and Monks, before whom were cited the Adversaries of Palamas, of whom they demanded the Reasons, which they had to make a Schism, and to rise against the Emperors, and the Patriarch. They alledged hereupon two Reasons, The first, The Addition to the Profession of Faith, which they were obliged to make, when they were ordained Bishops: And the second, The Promotion of Palamas to the Archbishoprick of Thessalonica. Palamas, who was present at this Council, cast in their Teeth, that they were of Opinion with Barlaam, and Acindynus; and the Council told them, that as to the Addition they complain'd of, it was but the Expositon of the sixteenth Oecumenical Council, and the Condemnation of Barlaam, and Acindynus. After this it was propos'd to enter upon the Discussion of the Question, and the Dispute was adjourned till the next Day. Palamas and his Adversaries debated it at the next Meeting. At the third these brought their Profession of Faith, at the close of which they declared, they were of the Church's Opinion touching Barlaam and Acindynus: Next they objected to Palamas, that he had writ several times in his Books, that there were many Divinities. The Emperor asked them, if they condemned that Expression or the Thing, which Palamas designed to signifie by this Term; for, said he, if it be the Thing, why do you insist upon the Term; but if it be the Term only, you quarrel at, and in the Thing you agree with him, why do you find fault with an Expression, which has a good Meaning? Palamas declared, That he would dispute only upon the Opinions, and not upon the Expressions; and protested, That he admitted not three Divinities separate from the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, but one sole Divinity in three Persons; though according to the Expression of the Fathers, he had given the Name of Divinity to the Operations and external Processions of God; that he made use of this Expression only to defend himself against such as said, that the Operations and Divine Vertues were created, and that nothing but the Divine Essence was uncreated and eternal; and in fine, That he had not set it on foot, with a Design to assert many Divinities; but on the contrary, he had ever made Profession of maintaining one sole Divinity in three Persons, almighty and efficacious. The Emperor and the Council approved of his Declaration, but they said, that the Distinction of the Operation, and the Essence ought to be examined more largely. In the fourth Session the Light of Tabor was treated of, and the Passages of the Fathers recited, which had been already quoted in the Book against Barlaam and Acindynus; from whence it was concluded, that the Divine Essence was distinct from the Operation, and that this Operation might be styl'd a Divinity. The Patriarch after this used his Endeavour to make this Doctrine to be approved by those, who had opposed it, and not able to effect it, he declared Ephesus and Gannus depos'd.

The fifth Council of Constantinople against the Barlaamites, in 1355.

Some Days after, the Synod re-assembled, to handle the Questions throughly, which concerned the Divine Essence, and the Operation. The Emperor propounded them himself, and the Council collected several Passages out of the Fathers to explain them. The Works of Barlaam and Acindynus were examined. The Deputies of the Monks of Mount Athos were heard, who expounded the Opinions of that Society, according to the Books which Philotheus, then Metropolitan of Heraclea, and after Patriarch of Constantinople, had written, while he was among them. In Conclusion they approved the Doctrine of Palamas, who delivered a Profession of Faith, in which he declares, that he believes one sole Divinity. The Doctrine of Barlaam and Acindynus was condemned, and all those were anathematized that were of their Opinion, and that did not acknowledge the Operations of God to be eternal and uncreated, and that the Light of Mount Tabor was not of this Nature. This Council was held about the Year 1355. Father Combefisius hath set down the Acts in his last Addition to his Bibliotheca Patrum, in the Year 1672. in the last Part, p. 136. together with the Refutation, which had been made thereof by Manuel Calecas, and by John Cyparissiota.

The History of the Greek Church.

Barlaam Bishop of Hieracium

Barlaam, after his Condemnation in the East, retreated into the West, fided with the Latins, and was made Bishop of Hieracium in Calabria. Wherefore 'tis not to be wondred at, that he has written for and against the Latins, and it is not necessary for this Reason to distinguish of two Barlaams. He has written against the Latins a Treatise of the Pope's Primacy, printed at first in Greek and Latin at Oxford in the Year 1592. and afterwards at Haynault, in the Year 1608. with the Notes of Salmasius, who since has reprinted it, together with his own Treatise of the Primacy of the Pope at Amsterdam in the Year 1645. And a Treatise of the Procession of the Holy Ghost, containing eighteen Articles, whereof Allatius has given us the Titles: For the Latins, a Discourse of the Union of the two Churches, related by Allatius and Bzovius; and five Letters: The first directed to his Friends in Greece, about the Union with the Church of Rome. The second, of the Primacy of the Church of Rome, and of the Procession of the Holy Ghost address'd to the same. The third, an Answer to Demetrius of Thessalonica, touching the Procession of the Holy Ghost. The fourth to Alexis Calochetus, to demonstrate, that the Greeks, who do not obey the Latins, are not only Schismaticks, but also Hereticks. The fifth, containing the Proofs of the Procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son. Allatius makes mention of these Works, and Bzovius has given them us in Latin in his History. They are to be met with also in the Collection of Canisius, Tom. 6. and in the last Edition of Bibliotheca Patrum, together with two Books of Morality. They are printed separately at Strasburg in the Year 1572. and at Paris in 1600. a Treatise of Arithmetick and Algebra, by the same Author.

In his Treatise of the Pope's Primacy he thus propounds the Question, viz. Whether Jesus Christ did commit his Church to St. Peter, and settled a common Pastor, and Doctor of the Church? whether the Bishop of Rome, as his Successor, ought to command and preside over all, and can decree what he pleases, without being to be contradicted by any, and that the whole World on the other side be obliged to receive his Decrees without Examination, as the Word of God. He asserts, That Jesus Christ gave to all the Apostles the same Power of Binding and Loosing, which he gave to St. Peter; and that when he said to him, Feed my Sheep, this concerns all the Apostles; that St. Peter had done nothing, but what the other Apostles had done; that they were not Bishops of one City only, but exercised the same Power in different Places; that those whom they ordained for their Successors, are particular Pastors of different Churches; that nevertheless St. Peter was the first of the Twelve Apostles, and their Superior, in that he was the first in instructing, and had the first Place; that the Church of Rome was the first, as so settled by the Laws of the Emperors, because this was the first City; that of Constantinople was equal to it in Power, though it were but second in Rank; that it belonged not to the Pope to ordain Patriarchs, seeing the Ecclesiastical Laws say expressly, they shall be ordained by the Metropolitans, and the Metropolitans by the Patriarchs; but there is no Law that obliges the Patriarchs to receive Ordination from the Pope; that the Canons give him nothing but the first Rank, and the first Place; that he is subject to Errors like others; that the Church of Rome ought not to be confounded with the Catholick Church, nor Profession be made of believing in the Roman Church, as one believes in the Catholick Church. Thus you see what he offers in the Treatise of the Primacy, set forth by Salmasius.

But he destroys these Principles in his Letters which he wrote to the Greeks, while he was in the West; for he there maintain'd, that every Church ought to be subject to the Church of Rome, and her Bishop, who hath received his Ordination from Jesus Christ; that his Decrees ought to be consider'd, as the Divine Scriptures; that we owe them a blind Obedience; that it belongs to him to correct all other Bishops, and to examine their Judgments, and to confirm them, or make them void; that he has Right to ordain other Patriarchs; that St. Peter received this Primacy from Jesus Christ; that his Successors have ever enjoyed it; that the Schism of the Greeks took Beginning but four hundred Years ago; that since this Time the Greek Church is fallen to decay, and sensible she is reduced to the last Extremity; that the Latins cannot be accused of Heresie for using Wafers, nor for holding the Procession of the Holy Ghost, seeing they follow in it the Opinion of the ancient Doctors of their Church, and the Practice of their Ancestors; and that the Greeks, who obstinately assert, that the Holy Ghost proceeds only from the Father, are not only Schismaticks, but also Hereticks, seeing they deny a Truth grounded upon the Holy Scriptures, and on the Tradition of the Fathers.

The History of the Greek Church.

Gregory Acindynus followed not the Example of Barlaam, in his Union with the Latins, but remain'd concealed in Greece, continually writing against the Palamites. Gretser has set forth two Books of Acindynus, concerning the Essence and Operation of God, written against Palamas, Gregoras, and Philotheus, printed at Ingolstadt, in the Year 1626. Allatius has published in his Græcia Orthodoxa, [i. e. Orthodox Greece] a Poem in Iambick Verse, made by Acindynus against Palamas, and two Fragments against the same; in one of which he makes mention of five Volumes, which he wrote against Barlaam to defend the Monastick Discipline of the Greeks.

Gregorius Acindynus a Greek Monk.

The Works of Gregory Palamas, which are extant, follow; Two Prayers upon the Transfiguration of our Lord, wherein he explains his Doctrine of the Light, which appear'd on Mount Tabor; that it was uncreated, and is not of the Essence of God, set out in Greek and Latin by Father Combefisius in his Addition to the Bibliotheca Patrum: A Prosopopœia, which contains two Declamations, one of the Soul against the Body, which she accuses of Intemperance and Disobedience; and the other of the Body, which defends it self against the Soul, together with the Sentence given by a third Party, set forth in Greek by Turnebus, printed at Paris in the Year 1553. and in Latin in the last Bibliotheca Patrum: Two Discourses of the Procession of the Holy Ghost against the Latins, printed at London: The Confutation of the Expositions of Joannes Veccus on the Procession of the Holy Ghost, set forth in Greek and Latin, together with the Answers of Cardinal Bessarion by Arcudius, and printed at Rome in 1630. He made a great many Works for the Defence of his Opinions, whereof divers are cited by Manuel Calecas, and by other Greeks, which wrote against him; and among others, a Treatise of Divine Participation; a Catalogue of Absurdities, which follow from the Opinion of Barlaam; Dialogues, Letters, Discourses, &c. of which the Extracts are to be seen in Manuel Calecas. There is in the Library of Augsburg, a Treatise in MS. of Palamas on the Transfiguration of our Lord, more large than the Prayers before-mentioned. The other Authors, who have written for or against Palamas, shall be inserted in the Succession of Greek Authors of this Century, which we proceed to recite according to the Order of the Times.

Gregory Palamas Archbish. of Thessalonica.

Nicephorus, the Son of Callistus Xanthopylus, a Monk of Constantinople, a studious and laborious Man, undertook under the Empire of Andronicus the Elder, to compose a new Ecclesiastical History, which he dedicated to that Prince; it was divided into twenty three Books, began at the Birth of Jesus Christ, and ended at the Death of the Emperor Leo, the Philosopher, that is to say, at the Year 911. we have no more, than the eighteen first Books, which end with the Emperor Phocas, that is to say, in the Year of our Lord 610. He collected his History out of Eusebius, Socrates, Sozomen, Theodoret, Evagrius, and other good Authors, but he has mixed it with a great many Fables, and has fain into many Mistakes: The Style is not disagreeable, and is correct enough for his Time. The only Copy of this History, which was in the Library of Mathias, King of Hungary, at Buda, was taken by a Turk and sold at an Auction in Constantinople, where it was bought up by a Christian, and after carried to the Library of the Emperor at Vienna, where it is at this present. Langius has translated it into Latin, printed at Basil in 1553. at Antwerp in 1560. at Paris in 1562. and 1573. and at Francfort in 1588. and Fronto Ducæus hath since published it in Greek and Latin, printed at Paris in the Year 1630. Father Labbe has set out a Catalogue of the Emperors and Patriarchs of Constantinople, collected by Nicephorus in his Preliminary Treatise of the Byzantine History, printed at Paris in 1648. and there was printed at Basil in 1536. an Abridgment of the Scripture in Iambick Verse, which also bears the Name of Nicephorus.

Nicephorus Callistus, a Greek Monk.

There is extant under the Name of Andronicus of Constantinople, a long Dialogue between a Jew and a Christian; wherein the Christian proves the principal Points of the Religion of Jesus Christ by Quotations out of the Old Testament. This Work is published in Latin, in the Translation of Liveneius, by Stuart, and printed at Ingolstadt in the Year 1616. and in the Bibliothecis Patrum. It is doubtful who is the Author, but the Time is certain; for the Author counts 1255 from the Captivity of the Jews, which, reckoning since the taking of Jerusalem by Titus, fall in the Year 1527. from Jesus Christ; which makes it appear, that Liveneius is deceived in ascribing this Work to Euthymius Zigabenus, who died before that Time. The political Verses, which he found in the Front of the Book, seem to intimate, that this Andronicus was of the Family of the Comneni, but one may likewise understand them otherwise, and perhaps not much strain his Faith. The Greek Original is in the Library of the Duke of Bavaria, where also are to be found other Dialogues, which carry the

the Name of Andronicus, the Emperor, viz. A Dialogue between the Emperor and a Cardinal concerning the Procession of the Holy Ghost, a Dispute of the Emperor's with one Peter, an Armenian Doctor, a Treatise of the two Natures in Jesus Christ, and a Manuscript against Joannes Veccus. I easily believe, that the Dialogue against the Jews is by the same Author, namely the Emperor Andronicus the Elder, so much the rather, because the Name, the Time, the Nature of the Subject, and the Manner of Writing, agree well to this Emperor.

Maximus Planudes, a Greek Monk.

Maximus Planudes, a Greek Monk, flourished under the Emperor, Andronicus the Elder, who sent him in an Embassy to Aquileia in the Year 1327, with Leo Orphanotrophus, to assure the Venetians, that he had no hand in the Murder of some of their Citizens, who had been assassinated by some Gallacians at Constantinople. He wrote a Treatise of the Procession of the Holy Ghost against the Latins, published in Greek and Latin by Arcudius, in the Collection he caused to be printed at Rome, in the Year 1630. He translated likewise into Greek S. Augustine's fifteen Books of the Trinity. His Translation is to met with intire in a MS. of the Emperor's Library, and Lewenclavius, and Arcudius have put forth some Fragments of his. Allatius in his Treatise of Ecclesiastical Greek Books, set down a Fragment of a Discourse of Planudes, upon the Burial of Jesus Christ, and the Lamentations of the Virgin, to prove that this Author believed, with many other modern Greeks, that Jesus Christ being descended into Hell, preached the Gospel to all that were there, and that all those, who were willing to believe in him, were saved. This Discourse was printed intire in Latin at Paris in the Year 1639. The Homily upon S. Peter and S. Paul, set out in Greek and Latin, under the Name of Gregory Nyssen by Gretser, and printed at Ingolstadt in the Year 1620 belongs to Planudes, as Lambecius has observed. This Author hath also writ several learned Treatises, of which some are printed, and the rest in Manuscript.

Matthew Blastares, a Greek Monk.

Matthew Blastares, a Monk of Greece, flourished about the Year 1335. and made in the compass of a Year an Alphabetical Table of the Canons, which is found in the Pandects of Dr. Beveredge, printed at Oxford in 1672. He is likewise the Author of a Treatise of Causes, and Questions upon Marriage, printed in Græco-Roman Law of Lewenclavius, and he translated into Greek Constantine's Donation, printed with that of Balsamon.

Nilus Cabasilas

Nilus Cabasilas, Archbishop of Thessalonica, flourished at Constantinople in this Century, under the Empire of the Andronicus's. He wrote two Treatises against the Latins; The first to make it appear, that the Case of the Division of the Greeks and Latins, arises from this, that the Pope is not willing any controverted Question should be decided by the Judgment of an Oecumenical Council; but will be the sole Judge, and others must hearken to him, as their Master. He demonstrates by the Examples of ancient Popes, by the Usage of the Church, and by divers Reasons that it is seasonable to call a Council; and that it is the only expedient to settle Union, and to decide the Question about the Procession of the Holy Ghost. The second Treatise is of the Pope's Primacy, in which he pretends to prove, that the Pope hath from S. Peter the Episcopacy of Rome, but that he holds his Primacy by Laws, Councils, and Princes. He there asserts, that the Pope is not infallible, and proves it by the Example of Honorius. He grants him the Primacy of Honour; but he pretends, he has no Jurisdiction over other Patriarchs, seeing he does not ordain them. He observes, that the Right of Appeal gives him no Authority over other Patriarchs, seeing the Patriarch of Constantinople hath the same Right over the Patriarchates, wherein he hath no Jurisdiction, according to the ninth Canon of the fourth General Council. He shews, that it is not true, that the Pope cannot be judged by any Person, or that he is of an Order more sublime than the Bishops; that he is subject to Councils and Canons; that he is not properly speaking Bishop of the whole World; that the See of Rome is not the only one, that may be called Apostolick; that it belongs not to him alone to call a General Council; and that if Canons cannot be made without him, neither can he make any without others. These Treatises of Nilus are writ in a good Method, Clearness, and full of Learning. They were at first printed in Greek at London without Date, in Greek and Latin at Basil in 1544. at Francfort in 1555. and with the Notes of Salmasius at Haynault, in 1608. and in his Treatise of the Primacy of the Pope, printed at Amsterdam in 1645. Nilus also made a large Work of the Procession of the Holy Ghost against the Latins, divided into nine and forty Books, whereof Allatius makes mention in his Dissertation of the Nilus.

Nicolas Cabasilas, Archbishop of Thessalonica.

Nicolas Cabasilas, Nephew to Nilus Cabasilas, flourished under the Empire of Cantacuzenus, and succeeded his Uncle in the Archbishoprick of Thessalonica. He was one of the most vehement Adversaries of the Latins, and composed a Treatise of the Procession of the Holy Ghost against them, and a Work called, An Accusation against the Latins, wherein he sets upon S. Thomas. He made an Exposition of the Liturgy, in which he treats of the Mass, its Parts and its Ceremonies. He observes in the Entrance of his Work, that the Effect of the Celebration of the Holy Mysteries, is the changing of the Elements into the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ; that the End is the Sanctification of the Faithful, the Remission of Sins, and the Kingdom of Heaven; that the Preparation and the Means are Prayer, Singing of Psalms, and reading the Holy Scriptures, and all that is done before or after the Consecration of the Elements. He shews the Necessity of those Prayers, and explains the Ceremonies of the Oblation, which precedes the Receiving; why, but one part of the Host is given; why, the Sign of the Cross is made upon the Host at the Mention of the Death of Jesus Christ; of the Thanksgiving after the Oblation; of the Prayers of the Mass; of presenting the Sacred Elements on the Altar; of the Sanctification of these Elements: He attacks the Latins upon this Subject, and pretends, that it is not by the sole Vertue of the Words of Jesus Christ that the Consecration is made, but by Prayer. He says, that the Sacrifice consists in this, that the Bread, which was not sacrificed, becomes the Body of Jesus Christ sacrificed. He explains in what Sense, the Saints are prayed for in the Liturgy, by observing that those Prayers are Thanksgivings, and that we rather pray them to help us by their Prayers; but that the Priest prays for himself, and for the Living, and for the Protection of a good Guardian Angel. He adds, that at the Elevation of the Host, he says, Sancta Sanctis, to signifie, that Saints only ought to partake of those Mysteries. He renders a Reason of the Usage of the Greeks, who mingle warm Water in the Chalice before the Communion. He affirms, that this Ceremony implies the Descent of the Holy Ghost. He speaks of the Communion and the Prayer said after it. In fine, he affirms, that the Sacrifice is offered for the Dead, as well as for the Living, as to the Effect of the Intercession, but not as to the Participation. He treats of the Effects of the Communion, and chiefly of the internal Sanctification of the Soul, or of the Spiritual Communion, by which Jesus Christ imparts himself spiritually to such, as are worthy to receive him, a Communion, which is more compleat in the Saints after their Death, than in the Living. He enlarges upon the Commemoration of the Saints. This Treatise of Cabasilas is to be met with in Greek and Latin, in the Addition to the Bibliotheca Patrum, printed at Paris in the Year 1624. It had been already printed in Latin at Venice in 1545. and at Antwerp in 1560.

There is another Work of Nicolas Cabasilas, Of the Life in Jesus Christ, divided into six Books, translated into Latin by Pontanus, out of a Manuscript in the Library of the Duke of Bavaria, and printed at Ingolstadt, in 1604. and since in the Bibliotheca Patrum, wherein he treats of the Sacrament of Baptism, of Chrism, and the Eucharist, which give, and maintain the Life in Jesus Christ, and speaks in a most sublime style, of the wonderful Effects of of these Sacraments, and of the Graces they produce.

There is moreover a Discourse of Cabasilas against Usury in Latin, of the Translation of the same Pontanus, in which he undertakes to prove, that all Usury is against the Law of God, and a Sin, though the Laws of Princes allow it. This Discourse was printed separately at Augsburg, and to be found in the Bibliotheca Patrum. Henschenius has published on the 5th of April, an Encomium of the Widow Theodora, which he attributes to Nicolas Cabasilas. There is in the Vatican Library a Work in Manuscript upon the Vision of Ezekiel, which bears the Name of Cabasilas. This Author writ clearly, and methodically, and treats of the Vertue, and Effects of the Sacraments in a very instructive, and most profitable manner.

Nicephorus Gregoras, Chartophylax, Charter-keeper of the Church of Constantinople.

Nicephorus Gregoras, born about the End of the Thirteenth Century, flourished under the Empire of the Andronici, John Palæologus and Cantacuzenus. He was the Favourite of Andronicus the Elder, who made him Keeper of the Charters of the Church of Constantinople, and sent him on an Embassy to the Prince of Servia. He accompanied that Emperor in his ill Fortune, and was present at his Death. He was afterwards in the Court of young Andronicus, and he it was who diverted the Greeks from entring into Conference with the Legates of John XXII. In the Contest between Barlaam and Palamas, he sided with Acindynus, and upheld him stoutly, seeing he is mentioned in the Synod held in the Year 1355. as one of the chief Adversaries of Palamas; it is not known, how long he lived after that Council. His principal Work was his Byzantine History, from the taking of Constantinople by the Latins, to the Death of Andronicus the younger, that is to say, from the Year 1204. to the Year 1341. divided into eleven Books; it is full of Errors, and he is accused of being too partial to Andronicus the Elder. Wolfius has translated it into Latin, and his Translation was printed at Paris in 1567. at Francfort in 1568. and 1587. in Greek and Latin at Basil in 1562. at Geneva in 1615. Father Petavius has published at the End of the Abridgment of the Hiſtory of Nicephorus, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, printed at Paris in 1616. ſome Fragments, which were wanting in the eighth Book of Gregoras: the Funeral Oration of Theodorus Metochites, made by Gregoras, was printed at Amſterdam in 1618. and in the End of Glycas, at Paris in 1660. He moreover made Scholia upon Syneſius his Treatiſe of Dreams, printed with the Works of that Author. Honſchenius, and Papebrochius put out on the 10th. of March, the Sufferings of S. Cordatus of Corinth, and of other Martyrs of Achaia, which they father upon Nicephorus Gregoras. The Books, which he writ againſt Palamas were never printed. There is a Manuſcript in the Library at Augsburg, which is a Diſpute he had with Palamas in the preſence of the Emperor John Palæologus, and another in that of the Vatican, compoſed in ſix Books, written againſt the Synod, which condemned Barlaam and Acindynus. There are divers other Treatiſes in Manuſcript of the ſame Author, in the Vatican Library; and among others, a Treatiſe of Eaſter, how the Miſtake ariſes in the time of its Celebration, and the means of reforming that Error.

Calliſtus Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

Calliſtus, a Monk of Mount Athos, was raiſed to be Patriarch of Conſtantinople, after the Death of Iſidore, about the Year 1354. He preſided, as we have made mention, in the Council held in the Year 1355. againſt the Adverſaries of Palamas; and having no mind to crown the Son of Cantacuzenus, he retired to a Monaſtery, but he was reſtored a little after by John Palæologus, who ſent him into Servia, to conclude a Treaty of Peace, where he died, in the Year 1358. Some attribute to him an Homily upon the Exaltation of the Croſs, ſet forth by Gretſer, and two Sermons, the one upon the Death of the Virgin, and the other upon the beheading of John the Baptiſt. The Work intitled, Monaſtick Method, or Rule, a MS. in the Library of Cardinal Barberini, attributed to Ignatius and Calliſtus, belongs not to this Calliſtus, but another, who was alſo Patriarch of Conſtantinople about the year 1406. ſeeing he makes mention of Nicholas Cabaſilas, who did not write, till after the Death of the firſt Calliſtus.

Philotheus Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

Philotheus, Monk and Abbot of Mount Athos, made Archbiſhop of Heraclea, before the Year 1354. was choſen Patriarch of Conſtantinople in the room of Calliſtus, who was expelled thence about the End of the Year 1355. John Palæologus afterwards becoming ſole Maſter of Conſtantinople reſtored Calliſtus, and Philotheus was forced to abſcond, till the Death of Calliſtus, which fell out in the following Year, after which Philotheus again obtained the Poſſeſſion of the Patriarchſhip, and enjoyed it to the Year 1371 which was that of his Death. This Patriarch, whom Cantacuzenus affirmed to have been commendable for his Sanctity and his Eloquence, writ many Books, but very few of them were printed; one of the chiefeſt was his Treatiſe of the Subſtance, Operation and Power, and Light of Mount Tabor, divided into fifteen Books, againſt the ten Books of Nicephorus Gregoras, which are in Manuſcripts in the Duke of Bavaria's Library, and the Vatican; Homilies upon the Goſpels, and upon the Annual Feaſts, in the Library of Bavaria, and that of the King of Spain; an Abridgment of the Oeconomy of the Man Jeſus Chriſt, and a Panegyrick upon the Holy Martyr Demetrius in the Vatican Library. Theſe are the Works of Philotheus in Manuſcript. Thoſe that are printed under his Name, follow: A Treatiſe of the Miniſtry, or the Functions of a Deacon, in Latin, in the laſt Bibliotheca Patrum; a Panegyrick of S. Baſil, of S. Gregory Nazianzen, and S. John Chryſoſtom, printed in Greek and Latin in the Addition to the Bibliotheca Patrum, of the Year 1624. Two Sermons, one on the Croſs, the other upon the third Sunday in Lent, ſet forth in Greek and Latin, by Gretſer in his ſecond Tome of the Croſs.

Theophanes Archbiſhop of Nice.

Theophanes, Archbiſhop of Nice, flouriſhed under the Empire of Cantacuzenus, and John Palæologus. He compoſed a conſiderable Work againſt the Jews, and concerning the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion, which hath not been yet printed; an Inſtruction to the Clergy, and a Letter of the Contempt, which a Chriſtian ought to ſhew, of the Pleaſures, and Evils of this Life. The firſt of theſe Treatiſes is Manuſcript, in the Jeſuite's Library at Rome, and the two latter in the Vatican. Gonſalvus Pontius procured to be printed at Rome in the Year 1590. certain Hymns, which bear the Name of this Author.

Nilus Metropolitan of Rhodes.

Nilus, Metropolitan of Rhodes, an Adverſary of the Barlaamites, ought to be placed among the Authors of this Age, ſeeing he concludes his Hiſtorical Abridgment of the Oecumenical Councils, as that of Conſtantinople againſt Barlaam, under Iſidore. This Work was printed with Photius his Nomo-canon, ſet forth by Juſtellus in his Bibliotheca Juris Canonici, and in the laſt Edition of the Councils. Allatius has publiſhed a Diſcourſe, which this Author made in Praiſe of a Lady in the Iſle of Chios.

John Cantacuzenus Greek Emperor.

The Emperor John Cantacuzenus, writ in his Retirement, an Hiſtory of the Reign of the Andronici, and his own, under the Name of Chriſtodulus. It is divided into four Books, and prefaced with a Catalogue of the Greek Emperors, ſince the year 1195. to the year 1320. This Hiſtory is well written, and faithfully; it was printed in Latin in the Tranſlation of Pontanus at Ingolſtadt in 1603. and in Greek and Latin at Paris in 1645. He likewiſe made an Apology, or four Treatiſes for the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt againſt the Saracens, and three Diſcourſes againſt the Mahometans, printed at Baſil in 1545. and 1555. There is a Treatiſe of his in MS. in the Vatican Library, intituled, Contradictions againſt Procborus Sidonius.

John Cyparisſiota.

John Cyparisſiota, was one of the Opponents of Palamas, againſt whom he made a large Work, intituled, Palamick Tranſgreſſions, divided into five Books, and each Book cantoned into ſeveral Diſcourſes, which is found in MS. in the King of France's Library, and of which Father Combefiſius has ſet down two Diſcourſes, in his laſt Addition to the Bibliotheca Patrum. He is moreover the Author of another Work, divided into ſix Decads, intituled, a Subſtantial Expoſition of what Divines ſay of God. A Work of Myſtical and Symbolical Divinity, put out by Turrianus in Latin, and printed at Rome, in the year 1581. and in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Man. Calecas, of the Order of S. Dominick.

Manuel Caleca, or Calecas, a Greek turn'd Latin, commonly believed to have been of the Order of S. Dominick, has writ againſt the Greeks, and againſt the Palamites. The Treatiſe he made againſt the Greeks, was tranſlated by Ambroſius Camaldulenſis, by Order of Martin V. whereof the Tranſlation was put out by Stuart, and printed at Ingolſtadt, in 1616. and in the Bibliotheca Patrum. It is divided into four Books, he there confutes in the three firſt Books the Opinion of the Greeks about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, and confirms that of the Latins; and in the fourth, after having juſtified the Addition made to the Creed by the Latin Church, he anſwers all that, which the Greeks blamed in the Uſages of the Latins, proves the Primacy of St. Peter, and the Pope. His Treatiſe againſt the Palamites, of Eſſence and Operation, was put forth by Father Combefiſius, in Greek and Latin, in his laſt Addition to the Bibliotheca Patrum. He there confutes the Work, or Deciſion of the Synod held under Calliſtus, Patriarch of Conſtantinople. We have in the ſame place another doctrinal Treatiſe concerning Faith, and the Principles of the Catholick Faith, in which he diſcourſes of the Unity of God, of the Trinity, of the Incarnation, of the ſeven Sacraments, and of the Reſurrection from the Dead. Allatius further makes mention of another Treatiſe concerning the Trinity, by Calecas, which has not been printed.

Iſaac Argyrus, a Greek Monk.

Iſaac Argyrus, a Greek Monk, compoſed about the year 1375. a Calendar for the Feaſt of Eaſter, according to the Principles of Nicephorus Gregoras. This Work was printed at Heidelberg 1611. and Father Petavius has inſerted it in a Book of the Doctrine of Times, wherein he has moreover ſet forth another Calendar, out of a MS. in the King's Library, which he likewiſe fathers on this Author.

Manuel Palæologus, a Greek Emperor.

Manuel Palæologus II. Emperor of Conſtantinople, may paſs in the Number of the Eccleſiaſtical Writers of this Age, ſeeing he has made divers Works of Morality and Devotion. The Treatiſes of Devotion are Prayers for the Morning, the Subjects of Compunction, or Confeſſion of Sins unto God in Verſe, a Pſalm of Thankſgiving for the Captivity of Bajazet. Thoſe of Morality are Precepts of the Education of a Prince to his Son John. Seven Diſcourſes of Virtues and Vices, and of the Study of good Learning. Theſe Works have been printed in Greek and Latin at Baſil in 1478. by the care of Leunclavius. Father Combefiſius in his ſecond Tome of his firſt Addition to the Bibliotheca Patrum has inſerted a long Panegyrick, which Manuel Palæologus made in Honour of Theodorus, his Brother, Prince of Peloponneſus, upon the ſettling of his Son in his room. He writ alſo a Treatiſe againſt the Work of a Latin, who made a ſummary Diſcourſe, to prove the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, from the Father and the Son, whereof Allatius makes mention.

Nil Damyla, a Greek Monk.

Nil Damyla, a Greek born in Italy, a Monk of a Monaſtery in the Iſle of Crete, wrote about the End of the Century, againſt the Latins, a Treatiſe of the Order of the three Divine Perſons, and the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, which is in MS. in the Vatican Library, and three other Treatiſes Manuſcripts, in the Library of the King of France, whereof the firſt is a Collection of Paſſages out of the Scripture, againſt ſuch as aſſert, that the Holy Ghoſt proceeds from the Father and the Son; the ſecond, to ſhew that the Church of Rome was not of this Opinion in the time of Damaſus, and that it began not to be there, till under the Papacy of Chriſtophilus, and Sergius; and the third, about the two Synods held on Account of Photius. Some Fragments of theſe Allatius recites.

Maximus a Greek Monk.

Damyla, in his Books, oppoſes a Greek Monk named Maximus, who had wrote Letters for the Latins againſt the Greeks.

Demetrius Cydonius.

Demetrius Cydonius, the Author of two Diſcourſes inſerted by Father Combefiſius, in the ſecond Tome of his Addition to the Bibliotheca Patrum, is not that Favourite of

of Cantatuzenus which accompanied him in his Retreat, and entred into the ſame Monaſtery; for theſe two Diſcourſes were made under the Empire of John Palæologus, the Son of Manuel, about the Year 1424. The firſt is to perſuade the Greeks to keep a good Correſpondence with the Latins, that of them they might obtain Succours; and the ſecond to demonſtrate that the City of Galliopolis ought not to be ſurrendred to Amurath, who demanded it to make up the Peace. There is mention made in the firſt, of a Voyage of the Emperor John Palæologus, Manuel's Son into Hungary, which he made about the Year 1424. there to ſue for Aid; and the ſecond is written in the time, that Amurath reigned over the Turks, who began not to reign till the Year 1421. Thus there is no probability, that the Author of theſe Diſcourſes is the ſame, who in the Year 1357. had already paſſed part of his Life; beſides, that he, of whom we ſpeak, abode almoſt all his time in Italy, there ſtudied the Divinity of the Latins, and at laſt went to die in a Monaſtery, in the Iſle of Crete. He was one of the Antagoniſts of the Palamites, and wrote againſt them a Treatiſe, intituled, the execrable Doctrines of Gregoras Palamas, put out by Arcudius, with a Treatiſe of the ſame Author about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, and printed at Rome in 1630. He has encountred the Opinion of the Greeks concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, and confuted the Work of Nicolas Cabaſilas, againſt S. Thomas. He tranſlated into Greek the Treatiſe of S. Anſelme concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, the Letter about the Uſe of Unleaven'd Bread to Valerian Biſhop of Naumburg, the Books of S. Thomas againſt the Gentiles, and the ſecond Part of the Summs of that Author, of which there be divers Manuſcripts in the King's Library. Where is found likewiſe a long Diſcourſe about the Preaching of the Goſpel, wherein he treats of the Fall and Recovery of Man, according to the Principles of S. Thomas. There was printed at Baſil in 1552. and 1559. a Diſcourſe of the Contempt of Death, which bears the Name of Demetrius Cydonius, and it may well enough be his, of whom we treat; but for the Letter directed to Barlaam, againſt the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt from the Son, inſerted by Caniſius in the ſixth Tome of his Antiquities, it is rather to be father'd on the ancient Demetrius Cydonius, than upon this Man.

The Council of Saltzburg in 1310.

The Council of Saltzburg in 1310.

THis Council held by Conradus Archbiſhop of Saltzburg, and his Suffragan Biſhops ordained nothing, but the Payment of Tythes to Pope Clement V. and renewed the 12 Canons of the Council of Saltzburg in 1274. the ſecond of the Council of the ſame City in 1281. the Decretal of Boniface againſt the Clergy, who exerciſed the Art of Stage-Players, or Buffoons, and that of Clement, which moderated the Penalty inflicted by the Decretal of Boniface VIII. Clericis Laicos. This Council alſo moderated the Penalty appointed by a Conſtitution, which Conradus had made in 1291. againſt Clandeſtine Marriages.

The Council of Saltzburg in 1310.

The Council of Colen in 1310.

The Council of Colen in 1310.

HEnry Archbiſhop of Colen, and his Suffragan Biſhops met in the ſame City in 1310. and publiſhed twenty eight Decrees.

By the firſt, they revoke all Ordinances and Cuſtoms contrary to the Liberty of the Church.

In the 2d. they treat at large of the Puniſhments, which they incur, who put to Death, abuſe or impriſon Clergymen, and they give many Cautions, that no Man does them any Wrong.

In the 3d. they forbid Confeſſors of Churches to require any thing for their Services.

The 4th. and 5th. renew the Puniſhments denounced againſt them, who ſeize upon the Goods, which belong to, or are bequeathed to Churches.

In the 6th. they confirm the Statute of Suffridus concerning the Life and Manners of the Clergy.

In the 7th. they order the Deans of Chapters to oblige the Vicars to read Service in the abſence of the Canons.

The 8th. imports, that none ſhall be ordained Prieſts, but ſuch as are 25 Years old.

The 9th. confirms the Puniſhments denounced againſt Clergymen, that keep Concubines.

The 10th. forbids, that Clergymen ſhould do publick Penances.

The 11th. ordains, That none ſhall read the Epiſtles and Goſpels in the Church, but ſuch as are admitted into Holy Orders.

The 12th. appoints, That none ſhall be Curates, but ſuch as are inſtituted by the Biſhop, or his Archdeacon.

The 13th. is, That they that have the Pope's Proviſions for any Benefices, ſhall provide for themſelves within the Time, otherwiſe their Benefices ſhall be vacant.

The 14th. That the Fruits of the Year of Grace of the Canons that die ſuſpended, ſhall belong to the Church, and not to their Succeſſors.

The 15th. That beneficed Perſons cannot bequeath to their Baſtards the Year of Grace (i. e. the Revenue of a Year of their Benefice after their Death) and that the Vicars of Churches ſhall be obliged to reſide and take the Revenues.

The Council of Colen in 1310.

The 16th. That Singers ſhall be able to read, and ſhall wear Albs during Divine Service.

The 17th. That rural Deans and Curates ſhall take care to provide convenient Ornaments for their Churches.

The 18th. That the Revenues of Canons ſuſpended ſhall belong to the Chapter.

The 19th. That no Man ſhall found a Church, or Churchyard, who doth not endow it.

The 20th. That Pariſhioners ſhall receive the Sacrament of their Curate only.

The 21ſt. That no Man ſhall curſe, or rail at any Man in the Churches, if it be not with a ſpecial Permiſſion of the Biſhops.

The 22d. That no Man ſhall be preſent at Clandeſtine Marriages, but the Banns of all Marriages ſhall be publiſhed.

The 23d. That for the future, the Year ſhall begin at the Feaſt of the Nativity, according to the Cuſtom of the Church of Rome.

The 24th. contains ſome Rules concerning Notaries.

The 25th. confirms the Decree of Siffridus concerning the Adminiſtration of Sacraments.

The 26th. commands, that the Holy Chriſm and Holy Oil ſhall not be denied the Curates, and that it ſhall be given them gratis.

The 27th. renews the Rules made concerning the Chapters of Monks.

The 28th contains divers Rules about Poverty, Retirement, the Cloiſters of Monks, and a Prohibition to require any thing for an Entrance into Religion.

The General Council of Vienne in Dauphine, held in 1311.

The General Council of Vienne in Dauphine, in 1311.

THIS Council was ſummoned by Clement V. to judge of the Accuſations brought againſt the Order of Knights-Templars, by his Bull dated Aug. 12. 1307. by which it ought to have met Octob. 1. 1309. but was prorogued by another Bull to October 1311. Many Prelates being come to Vienne at the time appointed, the firſt Seſſion of this Council was held Octob. 16. of the ſame Year. The Number of Archbiſhops and Biſhops which were preſent at it, is not very certain. It is commonly thought, that they were near 300. There was a conſiderable time between the firſt and ſecond Seſſion, which was ſpent in Conſultation. This laſt was held May 22. 1312. Philip King of France was preſent at it. The Diſſolution of the Templars was reſolved on in it, and the Bull was publiſhed about it, as we have ſaid. We have alſo obſerved what paſſed in it about the Memory of Pope Boniface, which was condemned to Oblivion, notwithſtanding the earneſt Requeſts of that King. Some ſay, that a Cruſade alſo was reſolved on there; the Begards and Beguines were condemned there, and their Errors rejected with Deteſtation, and the Pope made in this Council divers Conſtitutions; which are in the five Books of Clementines, publiſhed by John XXII. and are inſerted in the Body of the Civil Law.

The General Council of Vienne in Dauphine, in 1311.

Some of theſe Conſtitutions are about the Doctrines of the Church, and particularly thoſe which are under the firſt Title of the firſt Book; in which he defines, 1. That the only Son of God ſubſiſting from all Eternity with the Father, who is in every Place where the Father is, hath taken both Parts of our Nature hypoſtatically united together; inſomuch, that though he is the true God, he was alſo a real Man; that is to ſay, had an Human Body paſſible, and an intellectual and reaſonable Soul informing the Body by it ſelf. 2. That the Side of Jeſus Chriſt was opened after his Death, and that there came out of it Blood and Water to make a Church, which is one, without Spot, holy, the Mother of the Faithful, and the Spouſe of Jeſus Chriſt. 3. That the Soul is really the Form of the Body eſſentially and by it ſelf. 4. That we muſt acknowledge one only Baptiſm, to be the Means of attaining Salvation, as well for the Adult, as Infants. 5. That the Opinion of thoſe, who believe, that by that Sacrament ſanctifying Grace, and the Habit of Vertue is infuſed into the Souls of Infants, is very probable, and conformable to the Expreſſions of the Holy Fathers, and Doctrine of the modern Divines, and therefore is to be followed.

The Errors * of the Begards and Beguines are condemned in the Conſtitution contained in the third Chap. Tit. 3. of the fifth Book, and are theſe: 1. That a Man in this Life may acquire ſuch a Degree of Perfection, that he may become without Sin, and above the Eſtate of growing in Grace. 2. That they which are arrived at that Perfection, need not faſt or Pray, becauſe in that Eſtate the Senſes are ſo ſubject to the Spirit and to Reaſon, that a Man may then freely allow his Body what he pleaſes. 3. That they, who have attain'd this Spirit of Liberty, are no ways obliged to obey, or tied to practiſe the Precepts of the Church. 4. That a Man may attain the higheſt Degree of Happineſs in this Life, and have the ſame Degrees of Perfection as in the other. 5. That every intelligent Creature is naturally happy, and that the Soul hath no need of the Light of Glory to raiſe it to the Viſion and Enjoyment of God. 6. That

* The Begards, and Beguines, who are by this Council of Vienne condemned as Heretics, and many Metaphoric Aſſertions and Doctrines either feigned, or by depraving ſome ambiguous Expreſſions of theirs laid to their Charge, were, as ann Hiſtorians relate, a very religious ſort of Men, and much reverenced by many learned Men of that Time, but deteſting the Errors of the Church of Rome, and not fearing to teach, that the Roman Church was not the true Catholick Church, that Boniface VIII. and John XXII. were not lawful Popes, that the Emperor was not ſubject to the Pope in Temporals, that the Hoſt was not to be adored, with many other Things not agreeing to the Doctrines of the preſent Church of Rome, they fell under the diſpleaſure of thoſe Popes, and their Biſhops, who excommunicated them, and condemned in their Councils; but as Ockam wrote for them againſt John XXII. ſo at the latter End of this Age Gregory XI. ſtood up in their Defence, and abſolved them from their Excommunication, ſo that they ſpread much in Italy and Germany.

The General Council of Vienne in Dauphine, in 1311.

the Practice of Virtue is for imperfect Men, and the Soul of the Perfect may diſpenſe with the Practice of it 7. That to kiſs a Woman is a mortal Sin, but the Carnal Knowledge of her is no Sin. 8. That in the Elevation of the Body of Chriſt, it is not neceſſary for the Perfect to riſe up, or pay it any Reſpect; becauſe it would be an Imperfection in them to deſcend from the Purity and Height of their Contemplation to think of the Sacrament of the Euchariſt, or the Paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt.

In the fifth Title of the fifth Book concerning Uſurers, not only Clement V. forbids the Practice of it, but he condemns alſo them for Hereſie, who obſtinately hold and aſſert that it is no Sin.

In the fifth Title of the third Book, he forbids the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm out of the Church, and in the fourteenth of the ſame Book, Chap. 1. he makes divers Rules for the Celebration of Divine Service.

The ſixteenth Title of the ſame Book, contains a Bull for the Inſtitution of the Feaſt of the Holy Sacrament by Urban IV. confirmed by Clement V.

He renews in the eighteenth Title of the fifth Book, the Laws and Penalties impoſed upon thoſe that aſſault or impriſon Clergymen.

In the tenth Title of the ſame Book, he appoints, that Penance ſhall be granted to Perſons condemned to Death for their Crimes, notwithſtanding the contrary Uſage.

In the thirteenth Title of the firſt Book, Chap. 2. he declares, That the Cardinals, during the Vacancy of the Holy See, have not the Pope's Power, but may nevertheleſs provide for the Offices of Chamberlain and Penitentiary, if they, that are in theſe Offices, happen to die; that the Election of a new Pope ought to be made in the Place where the laſt died; that if any of the Cardinals go out of the Conclave before the Election, they ought to be compelled to return; that no Cardinal ought to be hindred from giving his Vote under a Pretence of Excommunication, Suſpenſion, or Interdict, &c.

The other Clementines concern the Collations of Benefices, Elections, Renunciations, Right of Lapſes, Patronages, the Age of beneficed Perſons, the Manners of Clergymen, Wills, Burials, the Inquiſition, and the Office of Inquiſitors, Treaſurers, Excommunications, Interdicts, the Authority of Judges Delegates, the Manner of Proceedings, and other Matters of the Canon Law.

The General Council of Vienne in Dauphine, in 1311.

Laſtly, there are ſeveral, that concern the Reformation of Monks, as Chap. 1. and 2. of the tenth Title of the third Book, which contain divers Rules for Monks and Nuns, and Chap. 1. of the eleventh Title of the fifth Book, which contains the famous Decretal, Exivi, concerning the Rule of St. Francis. In the ſecond Chap Tit. 7. Lib. 2. he regulates the Difference between the Mendicant Friars and the Ordinaries concerning their Preachings and Confeſſions, and allows the former to preach in their own Churches, Schools, and publick Places; but it forbids them preaching in their Pariſhes, unleſs invited by the Curates, if the Biſhop does not order them. And as to Confeſſions, he orders the Provincials and Priors to addreſs themſelves to the Biſhops, that they would permit them to chooſe a certain Number of their Monks to hear Confeſſions, whom they would preſent to them, to have their Approbation; that if the Biſhops think fit to reject ſome of them, they ſhall name others; but if they ſhall abſolutely refuſe to grant them ſuch a Permiſſion, the Monks may do it by Virtue of the Power, which the Holy See ſhall give them. In Chap. 1, Tit. 7. Lib. 5. he forbids the Monks to adminiſter the Sacraments of Extream Unction, the Lord's Supper, and Marriage, without the Permiſſion of the Curate; or to abſolve the Excommunicated; he forbids them to ſpeak ill of the Biſhops in their Sermons; to diſcourage the Faithful from going to their Churches; to make Reſtitutions; abſolve ſpecial Caſes; to vex the Clergy, by citing them unfitly before the Judges Delegates. And in Chap. 1. Tit. 9. Lib. 3. he decleares, that they, who have made Profeſſion in the Order of Begging-Friars, if they go over to another Order, ſhall bear no Offices in it, nor have a Vote in the Chapter.

All theſe Conſtitutions were not made in the Council of Vienna, but ſome before, and ſome after, and of thoſe, which were publiſhed during the Seſſion of that Council, none but ſuch, as concern the Faith and the Condemnation of the Errors of the Begards and Beguins, the Conſtitution concerning the Privileges of the Mendicant-Friars, the Study of Tongues in the Univerſities, and the Inquiſition, were approved in it.

The 16th. That Benefices ſhall not be given to Perſons, that can't read nor ſing.

The 17th. That all the Abbots and Priors of the Order of St. Benedict ſhall conform to one Service.

The 18th. That all Biſhops ſhall hold a Synod once a Year.

The 19th. That the Banns of Marriages ſhall be publiſhed, that the Curates may know, whether there be no Impediments; that Marriages ſhall not be celebrated from the firſt Sunday in Advent till after the Octaves of Epiphany, from Septuageſima-Sunday till the Octaves of Eaſter, from the Day before the Aſcenſion to the Octaves of Penteceſt.

The 20th. That they, who cauſe themſelves to be choſen, and get Poſſeſſion of Benefices by the Secular Authority, ſhall be excommunicated, and made uncapable to take any other Benefice in the Province.

The 21ſt. That ſuch as reſiſt their Superiors ſhall be ſuſpended, till they make Satisfaction.

The 22d. That Monks, that relinquiſh their Profeſſion as Apoſtates, ſhall not be admitted into any Benefice, nor Eccleſiaſtical Office.

The 23d. That the Jews ſhall have a Mark to diſtinguiſh them from Chriſtians.

The 24th. That no Biſhop ſhall exerciſe any Authority in the Juriſdiction of another; that no Secular or Regular Clergyman ſhall be admitted to Holy Orders, without Letters

The Council of Ravenna in 1311.

Letters dimissory from the Bishop, in whose Diocess he is born, dwells, or has a Benefice, unless it be such as are of the Order of Mendicant-Friars, or other privileged Persons; that no strange Bishop shall be allowed to perform the Episcopal Office, if his Metropolitan be not certified of his Ordination.

The 25th. that none shall be made Governors of Hospitals, but such as are not married, and will reside in them.

The 26th. renews, and greatens the Punishments denounced against them, who assault, abuse, or molest Clergymen.

By the 27th. the Blasphemers of the Name of God, the Virgin, or the Saints are excluded the Church for a Month, and if they do not do Penance, they shall be deprived of Christian Burial.

The same Punishment is ordained by the 28th. against those who remain above one Year excommunicated, although they have received Absolution at their Death.

The 29th. orders, that Censures be made use of against Adulterers, and if they are excommunicated a Month without leaving the Practice of their Sin, they shall be deprived of Christian Burial, although they make Satisfaction at their Death.

The Council of Ravenna in 1311

The 11th. That no Man shall be admitted into Nunneries, and Nuns shall not go out.

The 12th. That no Man shall have a Prebend, who is not 16 Years old, and such as obtain them, shall enter into Holy Orders.

The 13th. That Priests shall celebrate their first Mass within three Months after their Ordination, and afterwards, as often as they can, at least once a Year.

The 14th. That Curates shall teach the form of Baptism three times a Year to their Parishioners.

The 15th. prescribes a Form of Confession to be used at the Introities of the Mass.

The 16th. That the Clergy shall fast and give Alms three Days before they hold Provincial Councils.

The 17th. Renews the Punishment against Detainers of Ecclesiastical Revenues.

The 18th. Excommunicates the Secular, and Regular Clergy, which keep back the Profits, which belong to the Table of Bishops, Monasteries, or Chapters.

The 19th. forbids to pronounce the Sentences of Interdict, or Excommunication for mere Money-matters.

The 20th. recalls the Permissions given Monks to publish and preach Indulgences.

The Council of Ravenna in 1317.

The Council of Ravenna in 1317.

LAstly, this Archbishop, who always applied himself to his Duty, and Reformation of Discipline, called a Council at Ravenna, Octob. 27. 1317. in which he confirmed the two former, and published new Rules in 22 Articles.

He orders in the first, that Bishops should appoint Stewards to manage the Revenues of vacant Churches.

The 2d. orders, That no Man shall enter into the Ministry of the Church, who has not received his Mission from the Bishop.

The 3d. That those, who have gotten Benefices, shall enter into Holy Orders within a Year, as their Benefices require.

The 4th. renews the Rules concerning the Habits and Conversation of Clergymen, and imposes Pecuniary Mulcts upon such as shall contradict them.

The 5th. forbids receiving a Canon of a Cathedral, or a Monk out of a Monastery, without the special License of the Ordinary.

The 6th. That none shall be received into a Monastery upon the Credit of Laymen.

The 7th. That Notice shall be given to the Metropolitan of Ravenna, what Benefices are fain to him.

The 8th. That the Number of the Canons of Cathedral and Collegiate Churches shall be regulated, if not already done, and the Number reduced to a Proportion of the Revenues.

The 9th. is against beneficed Persons that do not reside.

The 10th. orders, That there be daily Distributions in Cathedral Churches, and one Table for the Canons.

The 11th. concerns the Taxes and Impositions, that Churches ought to bear.

The 12th. appoints that the Clergy be present at solemn Masses, and that private Masses shall not begin in the Churches, till the solemn one is finished.

The 13th. forbids Archbishops, Provosts, and inferior Bishops, the Knowledge, Instruction, or Judgment of what concerns the Persons of Clergymen.

The Council of Ravenna in 1317.

The 14th. forbids all Christians to lett out their Houses to the Jews.

The 15th. lays down divers Cautions to prevent Usury.

The 16th. ordains, that the Restitutions of such Goods, as the Owners are not known, shall be made by the Bishops Order, and they shall be obliged in their Wills to specifie the Cause of such Legacies.

The 17th. forbids Clergymen or Monks to hunt.

The 18th. ordains, That Clergymen taken carrying Arms, committing any Crime, shall be put into the Hands of the Bishop, without defaming Reflections on them.

The 19th. That only one Punishment shall be inflicted for one Crime.

The 20th. leaves it to the Liberty of the Bishops to dispense with the Age, and Qualifications, which such as are to be ordained, ought to have by the Canons of the former Councils, provided, that the Persons, whom they ordain, be capable.

The 21st. imposes a Punishment upon the Chapters, who do not give notice of the Death of their Bishop to the Bishops of the Province.

The 22d. gives the Ordinaries a Power to absolve such as offend against the Rules of this Council, but this Archbishop reserved for the future the Punishment of the Breakers of the Canons to himself, and the Power to moderate, or interpret the Laws of these Councils. And by virtue of this Power, he added two Articles to these 22 Rules. In one of them he allows the Nuns to speak through a Lattice to Persons not suspicious; and in the second, he sets down a Table of the Dues, which Notaries and Secretaries ought to take.

The Council of Lambeth held about the Year 1330.

The Council of Lambeth in 1330.

THE ſame Archbiſhop held a Council at Lambeth about 1330. in which he made 10 Canons.

The 1ſt. orders, that the Ornaments of Altars ſhall be kept clean, and the Linen ſhall be waſhed by Perſons appointed by the Canons; that Prieſts ſhall rehearſe the words of the Canon with Attention and Devotion, yet without Affectation; that they ſhall not ſay Maſs, till they have ſaid the Service for the third Hour of the Day; that the Clergy, who ſerve at the Maſs, ſhall be cloathed with a Surplice; and that during the Maſs, one or two Wax Tapers ſhall be burning.

The 2d. reſpects the Duty of Prieſts in Confeſſion; it enjoins them to be well informed, of the Nature, and Circumſtances of Sins; to impoſe Penances proportionable to Mens Crimes; to confeſs Men in publick; not to receive the Pariſhioners of another Pariſh.

The 3d. forbids Prieſts to celebrate in the State of Mortal Sin; to diſcover Confeſſions; and Monks to adminiſter the Sacrament of Penance to Pariſhioners without the conſent of the Curates.

The 4th. orders, that the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament of Supreme Unction to the Sick, ſhall be from 14 Years old, and that the Holy Oils and Chriſm ſhall be kept under Lock and Key.

The 5th. that Prieſts ſhall not celebrate Marriages, which are Clandeſtine, or without publiſhing of Banns.

The 6th. that none ſhall be ordained, but ſuch as are examined, and that ſuch as are ordained in Ireland and Scotland, without the Permiſſion of their Biſhop ſhall not be ſuffered to execute the Offices of their Prieſthood.

The 7th. and 8th. forbid the Alienation of the Goods of the Church, and letting Benefices out to Farm.

The 9th. that no Monk or Nun ſhall be ſuffered without the Biſhops Permiſſion.

The 10th. that Sorcerers, Perjured Perſons, Incendiaries, &c. whoſe Abſolution is reſerved to the Biſhop, ſhall be excommunicated three or four times a Year.

Theſe are all the Councils of England, which have made Decrees concerning Diſcipline, ſo far as we know. There were ſome others about the End of this Age, which made ſome Definitions of Doctrine, againſt the Errors of Wickliffe, of which we ſhall ſpeak in the next Age.

CHAP. VIII.

Hereſies and Errors Publiſhed and Condemned in the Fourteenth Century.

Hereſies & Errors publiſhed and condemned in the Four teenth Century.

THere went out in this Century of the Order of Grey-Friars, a great Number of Libertine Monks who under a Pretence of leading a more retired and a more ſtrict Life, ſhook off the Yoke of Obedience, rebelled againſt the Church, and fell into extravagant Opinions, they were called Frerots Biſechi, ſpiritual Friars, or from their poor Life Begards, Beguines; for though there were ſome difference between them, they had all very near the ſame Principles, and the ſame Way of Living; inſomuch, that they are often confounded, or joined one with the other by the Authors of thoſe times. The Ring-leaders of this Sect, were two Votaries of the Order of the Grey-Friars, Peter de Macerata, and Peter de Foro-Sempronio, who obtained from Pope Celeſtine V. a Lover of Retirement, leave to live as Hermits, and to practiſe the Diſcipline of St. Francis, in the literal Senſe, They had many Followers, and there was formed at Apulia, a Sect of Volunteer Monks, Vagabonds, Loiterers, without any Rule, without Superiors, who lived as they liſted, and made all their Perfection to conſiſt in a ſeeming Poverty. Pope Boniface VIII. having condemned them, ordered the Inquiſitors to proceed againſt them, as Hereticks. They retired into Sicily, and began to rail againſt the Prelates and the Church. About the ſame time, Friar Peter John Oliva de Serignana, a Grey Friar of the Province of Beziers, made his Commentary upon the Revelations, which the revolted Monks found very fit to authorize their Errors; for he therein treats the Church of Rome, as Babylon: He there promiſes a new Church more perfect, than that of Jeſus Chriſt had been to that time: He brags of the Inſtitution of St. Francis, as an Evangelical Rule obſerved by Jeſus Chriſt, and the Apoſtles: He there foretells the Deſtruction of the carnal Church, or Babylon, under the happy Influence of St. Francis. This Book having been brought into Italy by a Grey-Friar, named de Bodicis was received as a fifth Goſpel by the Frerots and the Begards. Some undertook upon the Ground of this Prediction even to chooſe a Pope of this new Church. They made themſelves a peculiar General, and Superiors, built new Monaſteries, took up a ſtrait and cloſe Habit, continued to rail againſt the Church of Rome, and to maintain with Obſtinacy the Errors, which they had drawn out of Peter Oliva; they added thereto, that the Sacraments of the Church were uſeleſs, becauſe they which adminiſtred them, had no Power of Juriſdiction or Authority. John XXII. condemned them, as we have obſerved, in the beginning of his Papacy, cried down the Commentary of Peter Oliva, and was at open War with them.

The Sect of Frerots, or Fratricelli

The Errors of Peter John Oliva.

The Practices of the Spiritual Brethren.

Many retired into Germany, where they were at quiet under the Protection of Lewis of Bavaria. They joined themſelves there to the Begards and the Beguines. This was an Inſtitution, or a Sect of Men, and Women, who wore a grey Habit, profeſſed to lead a Religious Life, without being ſhut up in Monaſteries, or ſubject to Superiors, who believed themſelves arrived at the State of Perfection in this Life, who railed againſt Popes, againſt the Church, and made no account of the Sacraments, nor the Practice of good Works. Their Errors were condemned, and their Inſtitution aboliſhed in the Council of Vienna. It is pretended, that they were ſettled by Gerard Segarelli of Parma, who after having given all his Eſtate to theſe Libertines, betook himſelf to Begging, and had muſtered up a Company of poor People, whom he had taught, that the Kingdom of the Son, who had govern'd with Wiſdom, being at an End, that of the Holy Ghoſt, which was a Kingdom of Love and Charity, had ſucceeded it, and that in this latter, all things ought to be in common, even the very Women, Dulcinus of Novaria, the Diſciple of Segarelli increaſed this Sect, and to render it more conſiderable, he taught, that the Church of Rome, her Prelates, and her Miniſters had loſt all their Authority, and that ſhe was ſurpaſſed by thoſe of his Sect, which was the true and ſpiritual Congregation. This Dulcinus having drawn a great Number after him, was ſet upon by the Troops, which the Biſhop of Verceil had raiſed, taken on Holy Thurſday in the Year 1308. with a Woman, whom he abuſed, named Margaret, and conducted to Verceil, where he was burnt: Some of his Diſciples were kill'd, or taken, and the reſt diſperſed.

The Begards and Beguines.

Dulcinus of Novaria.

There was moreover in the beginning of this Century or rather at the cloſe of the preceding, one of Ferraria, named Hermon de Pongeloup, who was accuſed to have revived the ſhameful Doctrine of the Ancient Gnoſticks, and to have maintained, that it was not permitted to Chriſtians to exerciſe Magiſtracy. He died in Peace; but his Hereſie having been diſcover'd after his Death, Boniface VIII. ordered him to be dug up, and his Bones to be burnt. It is ſaid, that the Diſciples of both theſe, made up the Sect of the Begards, and the Beguines; but there is more likelihood that it was formed by ſeveral Perſons, Men and Women, ſome of which by an ill govern'd Devotion, others out of a Spirit of Libertiſm, were deſirous to live after a ſingle manner, and imitate in ſhew the Poverty of the Friars Mendicants, without being tied to Obedience, or to the Obſervance of any particular Rule. It was impoſſible, that theſe ignorant People, and without Conduct, abandon'd to their own Will and Genius, ſhould continue long in that State in the Purity of Doctrine, and Manners. The natural Pride of Men inclined them to eſteem themſelves better than others, and to blame the Prelates; and the Inclination which Men naturally have to Pleaſures, drew them on into Diſorders. They ſhook off at length intirely the Yoke of Obedience, fell into ſtrange Extravagancies, and received into their Society all the Male-Contents and Revolters from the Church. Inſomuch, that this Sect was made up of People of all Nations, and all Opinions, which had nothing common, but the hatred they bore to the Pope, the Prelates and the Church of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Affectatation of a voluntary Poverty, under which they cover'd an infinite Number of Diſorders.

Hereſies & Errors publiſhed and condemned in the Four teenth Century.

The Sect of Herman de Pongeloup.

The Begards and Beguines.

In the beginning of this very Century Arnoldus de Villa Nova, a Catalonian, Phyſician to James King of Arragon, an Eloquent Man, broached ſome Errors at Paris, which were condemned in the Year 1317. by John Longerus of the Order of Friars-Preachers, Inquiſitor, and by the Grand Vicar of the Church of Tarragon, during the Vacancy of that See. Eymericus relates 5 Articles of the Errors of this Man. The firſt was, that the humane Nature in Jeſus Chriſt is in every thing equal to the Divinity. The Second, that the Soul of Jeſus Chriſt preſently after its Union knew all that the Deity knew. The Third, that the Devil hath perverted all Mankind, and deſtroyed the Faith. The Fourth, that the Monks corrupt the Doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt; that they are without Charity, and ſhall be damn'd. The Fifth, that the Study of Philoſophy ought to be baniſht the Schools, and that Divines do very ill in making uſe of it. The Sixth, that the Revelation made to St. Cyril is of more value, than the Holy Scriptures. The Seventh, that Works of Mercy are more pleaſing to God, than the Sacrifice of the Altar. The Eighth, that the Eſtabliſhment of Benefices, or Maſſes is uſeleſs. The Ninth, that he, who rakes together a great Number of Beggars, and that founds Chappels, or perpetual Maſſes incurs Eternal Damnation. The Tenth, that the Prieſt, which offers up the Sacrifice of the Altar, and he, which cauſes it to be offered, offer nothing of theirs to God. The Eleventh, that the Paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt is better repreſented by Alms, than by the Sacrifice of the Altar. The Twelfth, that in the Sacrifice of the Maſs, God is not praiſed in deed, but only in word. The Thirteenth, that in the Decrees of Popes, there is nothing but the Knowledge of the Works of a Man. The Fourteenth, that God has not threatned eternal Damnation to them that ſin, but only to ſuch as give a bad Example. The Fifteenth, that the World ſhall end in the Year 1335.

Arnold of Villa Nova.

The Sect of the Lollards ſpread throughout Germany, had for their Leader Walter Lollard, who began to diſperſe his Errors about the Year 1315. They deſpiſed the Sacraments of the Church, and derided her Ceremonies, and her Conſtitutions, obſerved not the Faſts of the Church, nor its Abſtinences, acknowledged not the Interceſſion of the Saints, and believed, that the damned in Hell, and the evil Angels ſhould one day be ſaved. Trithemius, who recites the Errors of theſe Sectaries, ſays, that Bohemia and Auſtria were infected with them; that there were above twenty four thouſand Perſons in Germany, which held theſe Errors rors, and that the greater part defended them with Obſtinacy even unto death.

Hereſies & Errors publiſhed and condemned in the Fourteenth Century.

John Villani relates, that one Ceccus of Aſculum, Aſtrologer to Charles Duke of Calabria, was condemned to be burnt in the Year 1327. at Bononia, for maintaining, that there were certain evil Spirits in the Heavens, who might be obliged by virtue of the Conſtellations to do Wonders, and he affirmed, that the Influence of the Stars impoſed an abſolute Neceſſity upon things, and on the Will; inſomuch, that Jeſus Chriſt had not been poor, nor ſuffered a ſhameful Death, if he had not been born under a Conſtellation, which neceſſarily produced this Effect; and on the contrary, that Antichriſt ſhould be rich and powerful, becauſe he ſhould be born under an oppoſite Conſtellation.

Ceccus.

The Errors of Eckard.

Eckard, a German Divine of the Order of Friars-Preachers, though a Learned Man, nevertheleſs delivered Opinions erroneous or dangerous, which were condemned by John XXII. in the Year 1329. Rainaldus recites a Letter of this Pope, in which he damns four and twenty Propoſitions drawn out of the Writings of Eckard, wherein he aſſerts, that the World was made from all Eternity, that the Glory of God ſhines equally in all his Works, even in the Evil of Sin and in Blaſphemy; that in Prayer we ought to ask of God nothing in particular, not ſo much as internal Holineſs, or the Kingdom of Heaven; that righteous Men are changed into God, as the Bread is changed into the Body of Jeſus Chriſt in the Euchariſt; that God communicates to them, whatever he communicated to his Son; that a good Man ought ſo to conform his Will to that of God, that he ought not to wiſh, he had not committed the Sins, which he hath committed; that God hath commanded no outward Work; that a righteous Man is one with God; that there is no diſtinction in God; that the Creatures are a mere Nothing; that there is in the Soul ſomething uncreated, and to ſpeak properly, one cannot ſay, that God is good. John XXII. declares, that ſome of theſe Articles are Heretical, and others to be ſuſpected, though one may by Explications and Additions put upon them a Catholick Senſe. He ſpares the Perſon of Eckard, becauſe he had ſubmitted his Works to the Judgment of the Holy See. It is plain, that this Author fell into the Exceſſes, to which counterfeit Piety over-ſtrained, ordinarily betrays.

Marſilius of Padua.

Marſilius of Padua, and John de Jandumo or of Gaunt, or according to others, de Laon, in oppoſing the falſe Pretenſions of the Pope, over the Temporalities of Kings, fell into the contrary Errors, attributing to Princes too much, and debaſing the Authority of the Prelates: what is to be blamed in their writings is reducible to four Propoſitions. The Firſt, that Jeſus Chriſt paid Tribute by bounden Duty. The Second, that Jeſus Chriſt, aſcending into Heaven left no viſible Head upon Earth, and that St. Peter had no greater Authority, than the other Apoſtles. The Third, that it belongs to the Emperor to correct, and diſplace the Popes, and to govern the Church during the Vacancy; that all Biſhops, and even Prieſts are equal, and have the ſame Authority, according to the Inſtitution of Jeſus Chriſt, that the difference had been made only by Princes. The Fourth, that neither the Pope, nor the whole Church, nor any Prelate had any Coercive Juriſdiction; and has no Power to pronounce Sentence of Interdict, or Excommunication, without the leave of Princes. Theſe Errors were condemned by Pope John XXII. and the Book of Marſilius, intituled, A Defender of the Peace; being after tranſlated into French, without the name of the Author, Gregory XI. complained of it to the Deputies of the Divinity-Faculty of Paris, who declared by an Authentick Act, that none of their Members had any hand in that Tranſlation; and that Marſilius of Padua, and John of Gaunt, who 'tis believed had travelled that way, were not of the Body of the Faculty.

The Propoſitions of John Mercourt condemned by the Faculty

In the Year 1347. The Biſhop of Paris, and the Faculty of Divinity condemned ſeveral Propoſitions aſſerted by John Mercourt, Profeſſor of Divinity in the Convent of Bernardines, and among others theſe, that Jeſus Chriſt could avouch a thing that is not true, and deſire according to his humane Will, that which may not come to paſs; that God wills effectually what ever he wills; that God makes Man to ſin, and that he wills with a Will of good Pleaſure, that Man be a Sinner; that a Man, who falls into any Act of Sin, yielding to violent Temptation, which he cannot withſtand, does not ſin; that the Habit of Sin renders us, as guilty as the Act; that God hath predeſtinated Men for the ſake of their future good Works, and the good uſe he foreſaw they would make of Free Will, and not gratuitouſly, and by his mere Mercy.

The Recantation of Nicolas d' Utricourt.

The Year following, the ſame Faculty obliged Nicolas d'Utricourt to revoke a great many Philoſophical Opinions, of which ſome appeared contrary to the Principles of Religion; and others to the common Tennets of School Philoſophy.

The Recantation of Dr. Simon.

In the Year 1351. it compell'd a Doctor, called Simon, to recant the Propoſitions he affirmed in his Act of Veſpers, which derogated from the Dignity of Jeſus Chriſt, ſuch as theſe: This Propoſition is poſſible, Jeſus Chriſt is not God, the Son of God began to be, &c.

The Recantation of Friar Guy

In the Year 1354 Friar Guy of the Order of the Hermits of St. Auguſtine, a Batchelor of Divinity, was moreover forced to recant divers Propoſitions, which he had taught, chiefly about the impoſſibility of loſing Charity and concerning Merit, ſuch as theſe; Charity, which one loſes, never was true Charity; a righteous Man performs no Action, that merits eternal Life; a Man may merit eternal Life ex condigno, yet ſo as God may refuſe to give it him without Injuſtice; that tho' there were no Free Will, there would not fail to be Sin; Merit comes ſo from God, that Free Will has no ſhare in it; God ſometimes neceſſitates the Will of Men, ſo that there remains in them no Power to the contrary.

Hereſies & Errors publiſhed and condemned in the Fourteenth Century.

The Recantation of Lewis.

Another Divine, named Lewis, in the Year 1362. by order of the Faculty, recanted divers Propoſitions, concerning the Attributes, and this among others, There is ſomething, which is God according to his Real Eſſence, which is not ſo according to his Formal Eſſence, which the Faculty rejected as contrary to the Faith; and this, The Will of God loves one Predeſtinated more than another; The Wills in God are diſtinguiſhed, as God is from the firſt Matter. And this, The Will of God cannot chooſe but will ſin, &c.

The Retractation of John de Chaleur.

In the Year 1365. John de Chaleur explain'd and revoked ſome extraordinary Propoſitions, which he delivered in his Act of Veſpers,

The Condemnation of Dionyſius Soulechat's Errors.

In fine, Dionyſius Soulechat, of the Order of Grey Friars, Batchelor of Divinity, having taught ſome Propoſitions condemned by John XXII. touching Poverty, ſuch as theſe: The Law of Love takes away all Property, and Right of Inheritance; the renouncing of temporal Riches, which is not abſolute and actual, but only in the Intention of the Mind, is imperfect; Jeſus Chriſt taught this total Renunciation by his Example, having kept nothing for himſelf, &c. they were condemned by the Chancellor of the Church of Paris, and by the Faculty of Divinity in the Year 1364. as Heretical, contrary to the Judgment of the Church, and Scandalous. Soulechat was forbid to teach them any more. Soulechat thereupon appealed to Pope Urban V. and going to him, he promiſed to ſubmit to his Determination, and to recant his Opinions, if his Holineſs judged it meet. But when the time of deciding this Matter came, he withdrew.

Stephen, Biſhop of Paris, cauſed him to be cited, as an Heretick: He returned to Avignon, where he made a large Explanation of the Propoſitions, he had laid down, and ſome of them he recanted, in the preſence of two Cardinals, the Maſter of the Holy Palace, nine Doctors of Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, and recalled his appeal: but this Recantation not having been ſatisfactory, and ſome obſerving, that there were beſide Propoſitions as liable to be condemned as the former, Urban V. ſent him back to Paris, and by his Bull dated the 20th. of December; in the Year 1368, turned over the Judgment of this Affair to John Cardinal Biſhop of Beauvais, unto whom he gave order to decide it, calling to him the Chancellor, and the Doctors of Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, and to oblige Soulechat to recant his Errors; the which he did the following Year, in the Church of the Jacobines, on Low-Sunday, renouncing moreover the Propoſitions contained in his firſt Recantation. Peter d' Ailly, in the Treatiſe he wrote in the Name of the Univerſity of Paris againſt Mounteſon, draws from this Matter of Soulechat, the following Concluſions. 1. That the Doctors of Divinity of the Faculty of Paris are obliged in Point of Duty, to take cogniſance doctrinally, of what concerns the Faith, as it is proved by theſe Words of Urban V. Doing herein, that which is their Duty, Suum in hac parte debitum exequentes. 2. That they have Power, not only to give their Opinion in Doctrinal Points, but further to puniſh the Members of their Body, who lay down Concluſions contrary to the Faith, in depriving them of the Privilege of profeſſing, and forcing them by their Sentence to recant. 3. That they have this Power, not only in regard of Propoſitions apparently Heretical, or clearly contrary to the Determination of the Church, but alſo in reſpect of thoſe, that are ſcandalous. 4. That an Appeal to the Holy See, by ſuch a one as will not recant his Errors and obey the Order of the Doctors in Divinity, excuſes not his obſtinacy. 5. That in the Caſe of Mounteſon, which was altogether Parallel, the Faculty ought not to be hindered from proceeding to a Debate, and to further a Judgment; and in fine, that John Mounteſon ought to be ſent back to be puniſhed at Paris, as Soulechat was by Urban V. We refer the ſpeaking of the Buſineſs of Mounteſon to another Century. One may read in the Bibliotheca Patrum the Cenſures and Recantations, of which we have been treating.

Errors of Bertolus de Rorbarch.

In Germany one Bertolus de Rorbarch at Wirtsburg delivered Errors, which he was compell'd to renounce; but proceeding to teach them at Spire, he was condemned, as a Perſon relapſed, and delivered up to the Secular Power, which ſentenced him to be burnt in the Year 1359. He had taught, 1. That Jeſus Chriſt was forſaken upon the Croſs, that he had doubted of the Salvation of his Soul, curſed the Virgin, that bare him, and the Earth, that received his Blood. 2. That a Man in this Life might attain to ſo great a degree of Perfection, that he had no need of Faſting nor Prayers. 3. That a Layman might be ſo enlightned, and have ſuch perfect Illuminations, that he ought to be believed before the Goſpel, or the holy Doctors. 4. That a righteous Man might get as much Grace, by eating common Bread, as by receiving the Euchariſt. Theſe laſt Er-

Errors make it plain, that he was of the Sect of the Begards.

Hereſies and Errors publiſhed and condemned in the Fourteenth Century.

We ought rather to place in the rank of Fanaticks, than Hereticks, one Martin Gonſalvus, a Native of Cuenza, in Spain, condemned by the Archbiſhop of Toledo, who would have us believe, that he was the Angel St. Michael, for whom God had reſerved the place of Lucifer, and was one day to encounter Antichriſt. The Fire which conſumed him, made it appear to him, that he was no Angel, but a Man, like others.

The mad Opinion of Martin Gonſalvus.

Nevertheleſs there was found one of Calabria named Nicholas, yet a greater Fool than he, who had a mind to make himſelf paſs after his death, for the Son of God, preached, that the Holy Ghoſt muſt one day be incarnate, and that at the Day of Judgment Gonſalvus ſhould deliver all the Damned by his Prayers. This poor Wretch having preached up theſe Whimſies at Barcelona, was condemned by Eymericus, and by the Grand Vicar of the Biſhop, and delivered up to the Secular Power, which ordered him to be burnt.

Other Follies of Nicholas the Calabrian.

The Viſions of Janovez

Behold another kind of Folly: Janovez of Majorca made a Book, in which he undertook to foretel that Antichriſt ſhould come at Whitſuntide, in the Year 1360. That the Sacraments of the Church, and the unbloody Sacrifice ſhould then ceaſe; that the Chriſtians, who ſhould have on them the Mark of Antichriſt, ſhould never be converted; but that Children, Jews, Saracens, and Infidels, ſhould be coverted after the Death of Antichriſt.

The Opinion of John de Latona about the Sacrament.

The Opinion of John de Latona, and d'Bonageta, of the Order of Grey-Friars, is not ſo extravagant; they erred by paying too much reſpect to the Sacrament, in preaching, that if a conſecrated Hoſt fell into a dirty place, the Body of Jeſus Chriſt would re-aſcend to Heaven, though the Elements remained, and the Subſtance of Bread return'd; that the ſame would happen, if the Hoſt were eaten by Rats or other Beaſts, and that the Body of Jeſus Chriſt returned to Heaven, while we were eating the Hoſt, and deſcended not into the Stomach. We have Divines of the ninth and eleventh Centuries, who were of the like Sentiments. This Doctrine was alſo current in this Century in the Provinces of Saragoza and Tarragona; but Pope Gregory XI. having cauſed it to be enquired into by two Cardinals, they ordered the Archbiſhops of theſe two Cities to forbid the preaching of theſe Propoſitions, on pain of Excommunication.

The Errors of Arnold de Montanier.

The ſame year Arnoldus de Montanier, of the Order of Grey-Friars, a Native of Puicerda in Catalonia, who had already been informed againſt to Nicholas Roſelli, Inquiſitor of the Faith, continuing to publiſh his Errors, was condemned by Eymericus, and by Berengarius, Biſhop of Urgel, and arreſted by order of Gregory XI. He taught, according to the report of Eymericus, that Jeſus Chriſt and the Apoſtles had nothing in peculiar, nor yet in common; that none of thoſe, that wear the Habit of St. Francis ſhall be damn'd; that St. Francis every Year went down to Purgatory, and took thence them of his Order, to conduct them to Paradiſe; and in fine, that the Order of St. Francis muſt laſt to Eternity: This is a Chain of the Errors of the Spiritual Brethren condemned by John XXII.

Hereſies and Errors publiſhed and condemned in the Fourteenth Century.

The Turlupines.

The Turlupines who ſwarm'd about the cloſe of this Century, in Provence and Dauphine, were ſo called from their infamous Practices; for beſides the Errors of the Begards, they held, That we ought not to be aſhamed of the Parts, which Nature has given us; they went all naked, and did, in the Preſence of all People, Actions, which Modeſty teaches us to conceal: Divers of them were burnt at Paris, and other places; and Gregory XI. exhorted Amedeus, Duke of Savoy, to lend a helping Hand to the Inquiſitors to extirpate them.

Errors condemned by Simon Langham.

In England Simon Langham, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, gave Judgment at Lambeth in the Year 1368. by the Advice of many Divines, againſt thirty erroneous Propoſitions, taught in his Province, which for the moſt part are reſolved into this Principle, That all Men, even Infidels, and Children dying without Baptiſm, have a Viſion of God before their Death, and if they are willing then to be converted to God, they ſhall be ſaved; that thus Baptiſm is not neceſſary to Salvation; that none are damn'd for Original Sin alone, and that no Perſon ſhall be damned, even for any Actual Sin, if he refuſes not to be converted, having had the Viſion of God; the which is a Sin not to be forgiven, for the Atonement whereof, even the Suffering of Jeſus Chriſt is inſufficient. There are alſo ſome erroneous Propoſitions concerning other Matters, ſuch as theſe, That the Father and the Son are finite, and that only the Holy Ghoſt is Infinite; that Jeſus Chriſt, the Virgin, and all the Saints are yet mortal; that the Virgin, and the Saints may yet ſin, and be damn'd; and that all the Devils may be ſaved.

Although Wickliffe appeared, and taught theſe Errors in this Century, we put off the treating of them to the following Age; to the end we may at once give an Hiſtory of them, and their Condemnation.

CHAP. IX.

Eccleſiaſtical Obſervations on the Fourteenth Century.

Eccleſiaſtical Obſervations on the Fourteenth Century.

WE will not dwell upon Scholaſtical Queſtions diſcuſſed by the Divines of this Age. It would be an intolerable Task only to repeat all their Diſputes. We will only make ſome Obſervations upon the Queſtions of Conſequence, which have made a Noiſe in the Church. One of the Chief is that of the Power of the Pope, and the Church over the Temporalties of Kings. The Popes pretended to make a new Doctrine of it; but in coveting too much, they loſt, what they had uſurped. Till then, no Man had any Thoughts to examine their Right, and they ſeemed thereupon to be put in poſſeſſion. The Haughtineſs, wherewith they had a mind to practiſe it over Philip the Fair, and over Lewis of Bavaria, made it plain, of what conſequence it was, and induced Princes to ſearch into the Matter. Thence they diſcover'd the Weakneſs of their Pretence, and oppoſed it; they recover'd out of their Error, the Soveraignty of Princes was confirmed, as to Temporals, and the Bounds of both Powers fixed. They began to diſpute with the Clergy the Right, of which they were poſſeſs'd, to exerciſe Temporal Juriſdiction, and to take Cognizance of many civil Cauſes under Colour of Excommunication, an Oath, and Sin. They had a mind likewiſe to invade the Privileges of the Clergy, and the Revenues of the Church. But they defended themſelves ſtoutly, and maintain'd their Juriſdiction and Immunities, by a great number of Canons and Regulations, wherein they uſed all the ways imaginable to maintain themſelves in their Privileges; nevertheleſs they own'd ſome Abuſes of their Juriſdiction, and applied Remedies thereto; but notwithſtanding all this, they loſt by degrees part of their Temporal Juriſdiction.

The Quarrel of the Eccleſiaſtical Power over Matters Temporal.

The Effects of the reſidence of Popes at Avignon.

The Reſidence of the Popes, and the Court of Rome at Avignon, whatever may be ſuggeſted, did not leſſen the Power of the Holy See. The French Kings made no ſiniſter uſe thereof to obtain favours of the Popes, which might prove prejudicial to their Authority. But as Monſieur Baluzius obſerves, after Nicholas Clemangis, the Italians brought into France the Debaucheries and Luxury of their Country Vices, from which till then it had been wholly free. The Court of Rome likewiſe introduced a way of litigious wrangling at Law. The Popes levied the Tenths on the Clergy, or elſe permitted the Kings to do it, on divers Pretences. The Schiſm, which followed, involved the Church in Troubles, overthrew the Method obſerved in Elections, and Collations of Benefices, filled the Churches with mercenary Paſtors, obliged the Competitors to do many mean things with the Princes to be upheld, to ſell Benefices, or beſtow them on their Creatures, and exorbitantly to levy the Tenths on the Clergy. It is hard to determine, which of the two Adverſaries had the Right on his Side; nay, it was never judged meet, in order to the removing of the Schiſm, to ſearch into the Right, it was found ſo very obſcure; and when the Councils of Piſa and Conſtance engaged in the Controverſie, they entred not upon this Queſtion, and offered no prejudicate Opinion againſt the Right of either; but they condemn'd and depos'd them, becauſe they would not renounce the Papacy, as they had engaged, and, as the caſe of the Peace required. The Schiſm has no way diminiſhed the certain Authority, which the ſupream Biſhops have received from Jeſus Chriſt, but it has ſhewed, that they have a ſuperior Judge on Earth; which is a General Council.

Eccleſiaſtical Obſervations on the Fourteenth Century.

Settlement of Annates, or Firſt-fruits.

Boniface IX. was the firſt, that ſettled Firſt-fruits to be paid by Biſhopricks and Abbies (that is to ſay, the reſerve of one Year's Revenue) whereof John XXII. had already given an Example, in putting a like Impoſition on Benefices for an Expedition into the Holy Land, and by ſettling firſt of all the Taxes for the Secretaries, that diſpatched Grants of Benefices, in Proportion to the Revenue.

The Inſtitution of the Jubilee.

Boniface VIII. appointed a Jubilee for all ſuch, as ſhould viſit the Churches of St. Peter and St. Paul, in the Year 1300. and ſo for every hundredth Year. Clement V. ordered the ſame every fiftieth Year, upon the Petition of the Romans.

The Queſtion of Poverty.

John XXII. had a great Diſpute, as we have ſaid, with the Grey-Friars, about the Propriety of thoſe things, which they conſumed in the uſing. This Queſtion drew on that concerning the Poverty of Jeſus Chriſt. There are great Volumes made on both ſides upon this Subject.

The Queſtion about the State of the Souls of the Juſt after Death.

The Opinion of this Pope touching the State of Souls after Death, made a great Noiſe; but this Queſtion was ſoon decided by Benedict XII. his Succeſſor, who determined clearly, that the Souls of the Juſt, who die purged from their Sins, enjoy the intuitive Viſion of God, wherein he makes the chief Happineſs immediately after their Death, or after they have been purified in Purgatory, before the day of Judgment, to conſiſt.

The Diſcipline of the Church about Benefices and Incumbents.

Provincial Councils, and particular Synods of Biſhops were frequent in this Century. All the Biſhops were bound to appear there, at the Command of the Metropolitan, or to ſend Proxies, and a lawful Excuſe. The Abbots, and the Deputies of the Chapters of Cathedrals were likewiſe ſent for thither. The Rules and Decrees which were made in the Provincial Councils were publiſhed, and put in execution by the Biſhops in their reſpective Dioceſſes: The Elections were yet legal, and according to Cuſtom for the Biſhopricks and Abbies. The Ordinaries for the moſt part provided for other Benefices. There was of theſe a great Number in Patronage; but ſuch as were preſented by Patrons, were forbidden to take Poſſeſſion, till they were inſtituted ſtituted by the Biſhop, or his Archdeacon; but as for thoſe, who were provided with Benefices with charge of Souls, by the Donors, who had Right both to confer and inſtitute, they were injoined to preſent themſelves to the Biſhop of the Place in due time. The Commendams of Abbies became very frequent; Clement V. who gave ſeveral of them, ſaw good cauſe to repent it, his Succeſſors continued them; and notwithſtanding the Revocation of Benedict XII. the moſt part of the Abbies began to be given in Commendam. Clement IV. reſerved to himſelf the beſtowing of all Benefices vacant in Curiâ. Gregory X. reſtrain'd it to a Month. John XII. in prohibiting the Plurality of Benefices, decreed, That thoſe who had Money, ſhould be obliged to reſign, and herein appropriated to himſelf the Donation. Benedict XII. reſerved to himſelf for his Life only, all the Benefices vacant in Curiâ, and all ſuch as were void by the Tranſlation of Incumbents, to other Benefices. Clement VI. made the like Reſervations; but Edward III. King of England, prevented the Execution of it in his Kingdom. Innocent VI. revoked the Reſerves by his Bull Paſtoralis; but they preſently return'd to the old wont. Gregory XI. recall'd them afreſh; but during the Schiſm, which came on, the two Antagoniſts made uſe of all Methods to render themſelves Maſters of the Benefices, and the Miſchief became ſo great, that the Princes were obliged to ſeek a Remedy. After the Death of the Incumbents there were nominated Adminiſtrators to manage the Profits of the Benefices; but the Right of the Crown took place in moſt part of the Biſhopricks, and conſequently the King, or ſuch as of Cuſtom, or Right, had the Adminiſtration of the vacant Biſhopricks, preſented to the Benefices thereon depending. In ſome places a Prebendary, when he came to die, might diſpoſe of a Year's Revenue of his Benefice, after his Death.

Eccleſiaſtical Obſervations on the Fourteenth Century.

The Plurality of Benefices was very common, in ſpite of the re-iterated Prohibitions; they were herein ſo remiſs, that Licence was given even to the ſame Perſon to enjoy two Benefices, provided they were not inconſiſtent, and that only one of them be with cure of Souls. Reſidence likewiſe was recommended, and ſuch as were provided of Benefices, were obliged to take the Orders thereunto requiſite. Command was given to pay the Tythe of all kind of Fruits: From this the Immunity of the Clergy, and the Revenues of the Church were exempted, and many Decrees were made againſt them, that ſhould attempt them; this Immunity was extended to the Leprous, who were ſhut up in the Hoſpitals. Never were Excommunications and Interdicts more frequently made uſe of, and all other Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, than in this Age. The denial of Chriſtian Burial was an ordinary Puniſhment, and the Councils condemned Men to Pecuniary Mulcts for Faults purely Eccleſiaſtical. The Excommunicate were not only deprived of Church Communion, but alſo of civil converſe, and ſuch as kept them Company, were excommunicated. Nevertheleſs, it was prohibited to make uſe of Excommunications for Matters merely Pecuniary, and to uſe Violence againſt the Excommunicate.

Divers Regulations made of Manners of the Clergy, and of the Practices of the Church.

The greateſt care of the Prelates in the Councils was to regulate the Converſation and Morals of the Clergy; they made many Rules in reference to their Habits, and their Shaving. As to their Knowledge, they required not that it ſhould be of any large Extent; they contented themſelves, if the unbeneficed Clergy were letter'd, that is to ſay, if they could read and write, and underſtood the Rudiments of Grammar; and as to the Prieſts, and ſuch as had Benefices with Cure of Souls, they deſired they ſhould be inſtructed in the Articles of our Faith, and the Ceremonies of the Church. They forbid the receiving any Prieſts or Clerks, who are Strangers and unknown, or to permit them to exerciſe the Functions of their Order. They enjoined the Prieſts to ſay Maſs at leaſt once a Month. They made divers Conſtitutions touching the Service of the Church, Reparations, and the Maintenance of the Churches, and the Ornaments. The Diſtributions made to the Canons, that aſſiſted at Divine Service, of which the abſent had no ſhare, were ſettled almoſt in all places. The Churchwardens and the Clerks, or Maſters of Schools in Pariſhes ſaw themſelves confirmed in this Century. Many Laws were made for the Preſervation of the Goods of the Church, to prevent Alienation, and to oblige the Clergy to uſe them carefully. They were forbid to bequeath, or diſpoſe of the Church's Goods, which they had got together. It was ordained, that the Fonts for Baptiſm ſhould be incloſed; that the Hoſt and the Holy Chriſm, and the conſecrated Oils, ſhall be kept under Lock and Key. They revived all the Conſtitutions, which enjoined all the Faithful to aſſiſt at the Maſs of the Pariſh every Sunday. They granted Indulgences to them, that would accompany the Holy Sacrament, when it was carried to the Sick, to ſuch as ſhould pray for the Pope, the King and the Welfare of the State, to thoſe, who ſhould bow their Heads at the Name of Jeſus, who ſhould aſſiſt at the Maſs de Beatâ, &c. John XXII. granted them, to ſuch as ſhould repeat the Salutation of the Angel in the Evening, and this Practice was approved in ſeveral Councils. They made many Decrees againſt them that eat Fleſh in Lent, or on Faſting Days. As to the Abſtinence on Saturdays, they made a Law for the Clergy; but it was not yet binding to the Laity.

The Number of Mendicant-Friars continued very much to increaſe in this Century; but they degenerated from their ancient Simplicity, and their former ſtrictneſs. Many forſook their Order, and turn'd Seculars, or went over to other Orders, that they might be capable of Benefices, Penſions, and Offices. The number of thoſe that did it, became ſo great, that they were forced to debar them, who deſerted the Order of the Mendicants from the holding of Benefices, or receiving Penſions, and having Offices in other Orders. They were alſo made uncapable to give, or receive any Vote. The Monks were forbid to admit any Perſons to profeſs before the Age of Fifteen, to ſuffer them to make Profeſſion, or detain them, before they had paſſed a Year of Probation, nor to delay their Admiſſion after the Year is expired. It was forbid to exact any thing for entrance into a Monaſtick Life. The keeping of the Nuns within their Cloiſter was order'd under the moſt ſevere Penalties. In fine, divers Canons were made for reforming the ancient Monks, who began to live looſely: and to oblige them more ſtrictly to obſerve the Diſcipline of their reſpective Orders, they were enjoined to hold frequent Chapters.

Eccleſiaſtical Obſervations on the Fourteenth Century.

Obſervations on a Monaſtick Life.

Clement the Vth. in the Council of Vienna, renewed the Decretal of Boniface touching the Preaching, and Confeſſions of the Friars Mendicants, whereby they are permitted to preach in their Churches, and in the Schools, or Publick Places, and not in the Pariſhes, if they are not deſired by the Curates, at leaſt if the Biſhops give them not expreſs Order. As to Confeſſions it is ſaid, That their Provincials or Superiors ſhall preſent ſome of their Monks to the Biſhop for his Approbation; that leave is given to the Biſhop to reject ſome, but he may not abſolutely refuſe to grant the Monks Licence to confeſs; and if he does, they may hear Confeſſion, by virtue of the Power given them by the Holy See; but they are wholy forbidden to adminiſter the Sacraments of the Euchariſt, or Extream Unction, or to marry any without the Leave of the Curate.

Regulation between the Curates and the Religious Mendicants about Preaching and adminiſtring the Sacraments.

Notwithſtanding this Deciſion, there were Divines, who aſſerted, That ſuch, as confeſt their Sins to the Monks, which had a general leave to take Confeſſions, were obliged to confeſs anew to the Curate; that the Pope could not diſpenſe with the Pariſhioners confeſſing once a Year to their Curates, nor give a general Power unto the Monks to confeſs. John de Apulia, a Divine of Paris, was cited by the Pope, John XXII. for maintaining theſe Propoſitions, and conſtrain'd to recant them; and conſequently this Pope condemned them by his unlimited Power, in the Year 1321.

After this, Richard Archbiſhop of Armagh, undertook, as we have already noted, to defend the Rights of the Curates, againſt the Friars Mendicants, and the Matter was brought before the Tribunal of Innocent VI. where it was argued in the Year 1357. and there it hung; but he appointed, till further Order, that the Mendicants ſhould be let alone in the Poſſeſſion they were in, of Confeſſing, Preaching and Burying, yet without Prejudice to the main Queſtion.

Nevertheleſs, there were divers Councils held in this Century, which revived the Canon, Omnis utriuſq; Sexus, and explain'd it, as meant of the Curate; and likewiſe ſome, which forbid the Curates to ſuffer their Pariſhioners to go to Confeſſion out of their own Pariſh. Yet, excepting the Prieſts, to whom they gave leave, to confeſs themſelves to ſuch other Prieſts, as they ſhould make choice of. As to Burials, they permitted the Monks to bury thoſe, that deſired to be interr'd in their Convents; but on condition that the Corps ſhould be carried to the Pariſh according to the Cuſtom, and the Duties paid to the Pariſh Churches. It was forbid likewiſe to build Chappels without leave of the Biſhop, and that they ſubmit them to the Ordinaries, as to what concerned the outward Service. Notwithſtanding the Prohibition of the Lateran Council, they ſettled in this Age ſome new Congregations, but they pitched on, to ſatisfie the Orders of the Council, one of the approved Rules, and ordinarily choſe that of St. Auguſtine, which was the moſt general; whereto they joined particular Conſtitutions.

Gerhard the great, of Deventer, inſtituted in that City a Congregation of Canons Regular, which he ſtyl'd Brethren of the Common Life, becauſe they brought all they poſſeſt to the Community, without Power to draw it back, in caſe they had a mind to quit it; they imploy'd themſelves in writing Works, and inſtructing the Youth in the Principles of Religion. The Jeſuites were ſettled at Sienna by John Columbanus, and were ſo called, for that they often had the Name of Jeſus in their Mouths, and lived according to the Rule of St. Auguſtine. Urban V. approved of their Congregation in the Year 1367. St. Bridget inſtituted about the Year 1360. the Order of St. Saviour under the ſame Diſcipline of St. Auguſtine, which was confirmed by the ſame Pope. The Order of Hieronymites was founded in Caſtile, by Peter Guadaſtinaria; Gregory XI. ratified their Conſtitutions, and ordered them to follow the Rule of St. Auguſtine. He gave the ſame Rule to the Order of St. Ambroſe, which he approved. There were alſo divers Military Orders inſtituted in this Age, as the Order of Chriſt eſtabliſhed in Portugal under the Papacy of John XXII. that of Alcantara in Caſtile, which depends on the preceding Age, not to mention the Knights of the Fleece ſet up by the King of France; and the Knights of the Garter, by Edward III. King of England, which were very different from the Military Orders.

Congregations ſettled in this Century.
